TWO AMERICANS DESTROY 15 JAP PLANES

Set 10 Others Afire in Raids On Burma Front

Six "Flying Tigers" Battle More Than 100 Enemy Bombers

Amazing Adventures of U. S. Fliers Described by Daniel DeLuce

By DANIEL DE LUCE

AMERICAN VOLUNTEER GROUP HEADQUARTERS, SOMEWHERE IN CENTRAL BURMA, March 24 (Delayed) (AP) — To the amazing record of the AVG in Burma add these exploits:

Two of the Americans who went out on a "mild" dawn observation flight destroyed fifteen Japanese planes for certain and set ten others afire;

Six of these "Flying Tigers" did battle with more than 100 Japanese bombers who raided their aircrome in three waves; and at one time a single one of the AVG men was harassing twenty-seven Japanese bombers, turning away only to tackle eight Japanese fighter planes.

The first of these adventures was on March 19, when Kenneth Jernstedt of Yamhill, Ore., and William Reed of Marion, Iowa, were detailed to an observation tour over Japanese-occupied Moulmein.

Lined up on the Moulmein airdrome were at least twenty-five Japanese planes.

Jernstedt and Reed sweeped out of a sheltering crowd and shot up the whole array with incendiary bullets. For good measure, Jernstedt dropped three four-pound incendiary bombs which he had packed in the flare chute of his plane.

Scout Ship Movements

The hour was still early, so they left the burning planes and lifted their P-40s out over the Salween river estuary to scout ship movements. Two Japanese fliers vainly tried to give chase.

The RAF later had a look at the Moulmein field and listed fifteen of the Japanese planes as positively destroyed, the others probably.

Two days later the Japanese sent their bombers against an AVG-RAF field.

Parker Dupuoy of Seekonk, Mass., who was a U. S. army flier before he joined the AVG, pitched into the first wave of bombers, but spied eight Japanese navy "Zeroes" headed his way, so turned to meet them.

At 17,000 feet he hit one of the Japanese, whose engine exploded like a giant firecracker.

Dupuoy found his ammunition was exhausted, so he scooted for the field which was under attack. A bullet penetrated the cockpit, but the fragments only scratched his right arm.

Cut by Glass Fragments

Jernstedt, who had gone to help Dupouy against the bombers, was cut in the face by fragments of a bullet-shattered windshield and had to withdraw.

An RAF pilot in a Hurricane got a Japanese fighter but had to make a forced landing with two other Japanese on his tail.

Anti-aircraft fire was believed to have destroyed a third Japanese plane in this engagement.

A second wave of Japanese bombers caught some pilots and ground crews on the field.

Pilot Frank W. Swartz of Los Angeles and mechanics John E. Fauth and William R. Seiple were struck by bomb fragments.

RAF Covers Wide Area in 36 Hour Bombing Attacks

Attacks Enemy from Western Germany to the Mediterranean

LONDON, March 26 (AP)—The RAF at dusk tonight completed thirty-six hours of the heaviest and most successful fighting it has ever had outside England, spreading its work in attack and defense from Western Germany to the British Mediterranean stronghold of Malta.

Taking quick advantage of a sudden improvement in the weather, hundreds of British bombers blasted the industrial Ruhr valley last night in one of the heaviest attacks yet made on Germany, and they flew also over France and scouted Italy.

Fight over Malta

Yesterday in a battle ranking at the top of all of the many engagements fought over long-besieged Malta, the RAF in defense destroyed or damaged thirty German dive-bombers—at least half of the attacking force.

Then this afternoon without letup the fliers of the bomber command, escorted by fighters, attacked enemy shipping at the Germans-held French port of Le Havre.

Eight German fighters were reported shot down in the Le Havre sweep, with no British losses.

Lose 13 Bombers

In the night flights, the foray over Italy, attacks on the German-held French coast and mine-laying flights over enemy waters, a total of thirteen British bombers was lost.

At least three Canadian squadrons were in the force which attacked the Ruhr and St. Nazaire, Nazi submarine base on the French coast.

Over Malta, Spitfires and Hurricanes took the air with deadly efficiency, pouring cannon shells and machine-gun bullets into the attackers to bring down or damage one out of every two which dared spread its wings over the beleaguered island.

Germans Hurled Back as Spring Offensive Opens

Invaders Launch Furious Assaults and Show Greater Strength

Aerial Activity Increases; Nazi Fliers Attack Murmansk

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Friday, March 27—The Red army, in a race against spring thaws and aided by night-striking Russian Guerrillas, were reported early today to be newly threatening the approaches to Smolensk, 230 miles southwest of Moscow, a key German defense point which the Nazis captured last August.

Dispatches said that Soviet troops had seized sixteen districts in the Smolensk area, and thrown the Germans partly out of ten additional localties.

Kill Many Germans

The high-organized Guerrilla bands were said to have killed 4,500 Germans during January—long before the regular Soviet army had reached that sector in the big winter counter-offensive.

Massive increases in German aerial strength and multiplying Nazi counter-assaults on the ground involving in some instances superior German strength were related tonight in Red army dispatches from many sectors of the front.

More than 100 planes, raiders and defenders, fought a bitter battle over the increasingly-important Arctic base of Murmansk, it was disclosed. (Murmansk's importance lies in its potentialities as a terminus for U. S. and British supplies.)

Nazis Lose 11 Planes

The Germans lost eleven out of sixty-six planes in this attack and caused no damage, a Murmansk dispatch said. (The Germans had claimed destruction of a supply ship and eight Russian planes.)

From other combat areas the increase in German planes was noted. In one case they outnumbered the Russians 27 to 3.

The many German counter-attacks, notably on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow and in the Donets Basin, were described by the Communist newspaper Pravda as an "active defense" which has not wrested the initiative from the Russians.

On the northwest, the Germans counter-attacked three times but were reported repulsed with considerable casualties.

Japanese Launch Air Attacks on Corregidor Forts

Bomb and Shell Stronghold When Surrender Demand Is Ignored

By DEAN SCHEDLER

CORREGIDOR, P. I., March 24 (Delayed) — (AP) — The Japanese switched from leaflets to bombs today after the failure of another of their many "peace offerings" but Philippine-American anti-aircraft gunners held off two full-fledged air raids on Corregidor island.

The most recent Japanese-set zero hour, Sunday noon March 22, passed uneventfully.

At 9:24 o'clock this morning nine heavy twin-engined enemy bombers came out of a clear western sky and unloaded a string of bombs on this fortress of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commander of the Filipino-American forces. Twenty minutes later, twenty-seven bombers came from the northeast and unloaded.

These were the first bombs dropped on Corregidor since January 14.

Japs Remain High

The group of twenty-seven planes stayed above 22,000 feet but did not get away untouched. It was reported that an ack-ack shell exploded in the middle of the formation, getting at least one plane and probably shaking up the others.

Thirty-One Men Blown to Bits Near Easton, Pa.

Dynamite Explosion Rocks Wide Area and Does Much Damage

EASTON, Pa., March 26 (AP) — Thirty-one men were literally blown to bits today by an earth-shaking, premature explosion of twenty tons of dynamite in a limestone quarry of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company on the banks of the Delaware river five miles north of Easton.

So terrific was the concussion that it was felt fifty miles away. Hardly a house or building for miles around escaped damage. Many persons were injured, including a dozen children cut by broken glass in a grade school half a mile from the scene.

"The whole world just seemed to shake," one worker said.

Tonight investigators continued to search the area, fearful the death toll would rise still higher.

The explosive had been assembled on the rim of the pit in preparation for blasting away an entire side. During a lull in operations some of the workers opened their lunch boxes for a mid-morning snack in the spring sunshine. Then suddenly the blast let go.

Wrecks Homes Miles Away

Parts of some bodies were hurled 300 yards. Windows were shattered in Bethlehem and Allentown, eighteen and sixteen miles away homes were jarred open and windown twisted askew. A barn collapsed on a farm a half mile from the quarry. Sleepers were tossed from beds in nearby homes.

However, sixteen workers in the General Pledges Blood and Power of U. S. To Defeat Germany

By TOM YARBROUGH

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA, March 26 (AP)—In a khaki blouse devoid of medals or even the insignia of rank, General Douglas MacArthur stood before the leaders of Australia tonight and pledged the blood and power of the United States to an unremitting crusade for freedom.

Speaking at a dinner in his honor at Parliament House, the supreme commander of the American and Australian forces made his vow and bound up the destinies of the two nations in these crisp, fervid sentences:

"There is a link that binds our countries together which does not depend upon a written protocol, upon treaties of alliance or upon diplomatic doctrine. It goes deeper than that. It is that indescribable consanguinity of race which causes us to have the same aspirations, the same hopes and desires, the same ideals and the same dreams of future destiny.

Confident of Victory

"My presence here is tangible evidence of our unity. I have come as a soldier in a great crusade of personal liberty as opposed to perpetual slavery.

"My faith in our ultimate victory is invincible, and I bring you tonight the unbreakable spirit of the free man's military code in support of our just cause.

"That code has come down to us from even before the days of knighthood and chivalry. It will stand the test of any ethics or

Two Oil Magnates Drive Test Wells In West Virginia

Benedum and Trees Hope To Relieve Petroleum Shortage

By EDWARD HIGGS

PITTSBURGH, March 26 (AP) — Michael Benedum and Joe Trees, America's No. 1 oil wildcatters, disclosed today they had acquired leases on 200,000 acres in West Virginia and started drilling deep test wells in the hope of reviving oil production there and relieving the east coast petroleum shortage.

The two, who drilled their first oil well forty-six years ago within gunshot of the No. 1 deep test well, are staking $500,000 on their belief that a vast pool of oil lies untapped in the Oriskany sands near the Ohio river in the West Central section of the state.

The Oriskany is 6,000 feet underground there, 5,100 to 5,300 feet deeper than the first oil wells were sunk at the turn of the century during West Virginia's oil boom days. West Virginia wells produce prime Pennsylvania grade crude, also found in Western Pennsylvania and Western New York.

Opened Rich Fields

Benedum and Trees, who have opened some of the world's most profitable fields, first got the idea for re-developing the field after the gasoline shortage occurred in the east last year. The work was further spurred by recent tanker sinkings and rise in oil demand. Pipelines, Ohio river barges and railroads link that section with the east.

Benedum, who claims still to have the first dollar he earned and is reputed to have amassed $70,000,000 more, also was described by an associate as being inspired by "sentiment" in the venture. A native of West Virginia, he wants to bring back prosperity to the section where he got his start.

Once a turbulent field spouting "black gold," the wells in the area are virtually depleted, producing about one half barrel a day.

Surveys Completed

Geological surveys were started nine months ago by three Benedum-Trees affiliates, the Plymouth Oil, Benedum-Trees Oil and the Hiawatha Oil and Gas Companies. Upwards of $400,000 was spent for leasing and an additional $100,000 for test drilling, a spokesman said.

The first test well already has been put down to a depth of 4,500 feet, leaving about three weeks'

Sailor Swims Back to Vessel after Torpedoing and Hoists Old Glory

NORFOLK, Va., March 26 (AP)—Through the daring of her boatswain, the Stars and Stripes fluttered to the last above the deck of a small American merchant ship sunk Monday off the Atlantic coast, but only fourteen members of the thirty-eight man crew were rescued, the Fifth naval district reported today.

Four bodies and the survivors were landed at Morehead City, N. C. The other twenty crewmen were missing and presumed lost.

Garland Henderson of New Orleans, La., the boatswain, told Ensign Joseph Sierer of the navy public relations staff how he jumped from a lifeboat two hours after the vessel was torpedoed, swam back to the sinking ship and raised the flag.

Flag Last to Sink

"It was a good flag, a brand new one," he said, "and she was still fluttering, the last thing to go under when the ship finally settled."

Able Seaman Floyd of Houston, Texas, duplicated Henderson's feat of swimming back to the sinking ship.

Henderson remained aboard until rescue vessels neared, then jumped

Green and Murray Agree To Abolish Slow-Downs in Industry; Rep. Smith Presses for Action

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP) — Slow-downs were denounced by the leadership of both the CIO and AFL today and the machinery of its war labor board swung into action to eliminate that form of obstacle to production.

With the approval of a CIO union, William E. Baldwin, a special investigator for the Labor Board, recommended that four CIO stewards employed by the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Company of America be discharged for instigating a slow-down in the plant.

Meanwhile, on Capitol Hill, demands continued to be heard for new labor legislation. Senator Pepper (D-Fla) urged the abolition, for the duration of the war, of all legal restrictions on the hours of labor. In a Senate speech he urged the establishment of a tribunal empowered to fix working hours, wages, salaries, profits, prices and bonuses.

Would Outlaw Union Fees

Under his plans, Congress also would outlaw the payment of initiation fees to any organization as a condition to obtaining employment in war production.

President William Green of the AFL and Philip Murray of the CIO pledged action against any slow down as they appeared before the House Naval committee to oppose the pending Smith bill, which would outlaw the closed shop for the duration of the war, and suspend the law requiring time and a half pay for work in excess of forty hours weekly.

In response to questions, Green characterized slow-downs as "reprehensible" and said if any such instances is brought to his attention "I won't tolerate it for a minute."

Murray Promises Action

When Rep. Anderson (R-Calif) said he was informed there had been slow-downs in west coast shipyards, Murray pledged that "if there is a slow-down in any plant over which I have jurisdiction, it will be immediately stopped."

On the House floor, Rep. Smith (D-Va), author of the bill to which Green and Murray objected, criticized the Senate for failure to act on pending anti-strike legislation.

"It appears that the Senate proposes to investigate the causes of the tremendous up-surge of public sentiment against the continuation of union labor abuses," Smith said.

"It seems passing strange that John Q. Public should be investigated because he writes to his congressman.

"John Q. Public thinks it would be more appropriate if the Senate would investigate why the anti-strike bill, that the House passed by a vote of two to one on December third, has not been acted upon by the Senate."

Synthetic Rubber Shortage Is Laid To Standard Oil

Thurman Arnold Says Jersey Corporation Gave Secrets to Germany

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP)—Thurman Arnold declared today that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey had "frustrated the creation of an American synthetic rubber industry" by turning improved manufacturing processes over to German interests, prior to United States entry into the war, while at the same time withholding them from American firms.

Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of the anti-trust division, told the Senate Defense investigating committee that Cartel arrangements between Standard Oil and the I. G. Farben Trust of Germany were "the principal cause of our present shortage of synthetic rubber."

Furthermore, he asserted, Standard had estimated that synthetic rubber could be produced by its processes at a cost below the price of natural rubber.

Patents Now Free

Only department of justice action which resulted yesterday in a consent decree and payments of fines, Arnold said, succeeded in making available to the American government and industries patents for the synthetic rubber, synthetic gasoline and various other chemicals as well as the "know-how" of their application.

As a result of that action, Arnold expressed the opinion that "in the future, with some supervision by an

Teacher, Flogged by Mother of Boy, Denies She Thumped Him with a Book

LAFAYETTE, Ind., March 26 (AP) —After denying that she thumped 11-year-old Danny Leslie on the head with a book, a pretty young school teacher turned psychologist on the witness stand today to testify that her studies on that subject indicated Danny's mother "knew what she was doing" when she flogged the teacher with a belt Feb. 27.

Miss Constance Davis, the teacher, was the state's star witness at the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Leslie, Danny's parents, for assault and battery.

Mrs. Leslie is accused of having lashed Miss Davis with the belt because Danny told her the teacher had hit him on the head with a book

American Gunners Repel Six-Hour Air Attack upon Manila Bay Forts

WASHINGTON, March 26—Battling a six-hour Japanese air attack on the Manila bay fortifications in the Philippines, defending anti-aircraft gunners swelled today to at least twenty-four their total score of enemy planes shot down.

Four large bombers were sent crashing out of fifty-four which subjected the island forts to aerial bombardment described tersely by the War department as heavy.

As on Tuesday, when the bombing was renewed after a respite of more than two months, the Japanese air attack was concentrated on Corregidor, site of Fort Mills and key to the Manila Bay system of fixed defensives.

Only a Few Casualties

Aside from loss of the four planes, the effect was described officially as slight damage to military installations and only a few casualties to defending troops.

On the nearby Bataan peninsula, there were sharp skirmishes between patrols in a continuation of the recent intensified fighting which

Issues Executive Order Designed To Help Small Concerns

WASHINGTON, March 26. (AP)—President Roosevelt took a direct hand today in the effort to bring small business and industry into the vast war production effort by an executive order authorizing direct or government-guaranteed loans to finance handling of arms contracts.

Three senators who watched him sign the official order lauded this as a fine step for the smaller plants and factories but announced they would push ahead for Congressional approval of the small business measure reported favorably to the Senate yesterday by its Banking and Currency committee.

"Our small business bill is much broader than the executive order," Chairman Murray (D-Mont), of the special Senate committee on small business, said. "The order will greatly strengthen our bill and we're going ahead."

Say Legislation Needed

Senators Mead (D-NY) and Capper (R-Kan) who went to the White House with Murray agreed that the new order had not obviated need for legislation.

"There can be no compromise; we shall win or we shall die, and to this end I pledge you the full resources of all the mighty power of my country and all the blood of my countrymen."

As he concluded with a toast to Australia and Australians, the assemblage of Parliament members and government chiefs ended the hush with a spontaneous and tremendous ovation.

MacArthur Praised

In the corridors on every hand there were such comments as "great speech" . . . "splendid effort" . . . "short and to the point."

Many of the listeners were impressed by the notable simplicity of MacArthur's garb, its total absence of decoration despite the applauded announcement by U. S. Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson that MacArthur had been awarded the congressional medal of honor, his country's highest tribute to valor.

As one said, "what I liked was that three-and-six suit he wore. Our blokes go around in 12-guinea outfits."

(Translated into American argot, the comparison would be roughly a dungaree suit to a tailor-made.)

Pays Visit to House

Prior to the dinner MacArthur visited the House during a warm debate and later shook hands with each member individually.

"If the rest of the Australians can fight as well as these can argue, the war is as good as won," he joked as he met the speaker.

MacArthur spent two hours with the war cabinet.

Prime Minister John Curtin said they discussed "the composite structure and disposition of Allied forces in being and reinforcements required. The enemy's tactics and strategy were reviewed . . .

"The confidence and determination of General MacArthur were manifest in all our deliberations. x x x

Although wells have been sunk to 8,000-foot depths in other parts of West Virginia, they have produced gas instead of oil.

Japanese Launch

Another sixteen bombers crossed the island later, heading for Bataan peninsula and the exploding of their bombs was heard. At the same time big Japanese guns on the Cavite shore line opened up and landed shells on Corregidor but caused no military damage to speak of.

Corregidor's sharpshooting AA gunners carried the brunt of the battle throughout and in all accounted for two and possibly three enemy planes.

Prior to the Sunday noon zero hour leaflets were dropped on the Bataan fronts asserting that General Douglas MacArthur, "realizing the impossible situation, has taken the last out—safer grounds"

Cheers for MacArthur

Filipino and American forces were undismayed by the news of MacArthur's departure from the Philippine front and were aroused to wild cheers when it was announced that he had been made supreme commander of the United Nations forces in the southwest Pacific.

The newest leaflet campaign of the Japanese, however, has aroused a new interest among the Filipino-American fighters because the printed matter was wrapped around empty beer cans and each one had a streamer of cheap, brightly colored ribbons.

They were labeled "deliver to the commander-in-chief of the USAFE" and the printed matter contained details of Japanese aims to employ "humane efforts to save the courageous Filipinos and Americans from certain starvation, since the Japanese blockade is effective and superior Japanese forces are poised to crush Bataan and the nearby fortified islands."

But when the zero hour came, everything was quiet.

Renewal of the bombing made it evident, American officers said, that the Japanese realized they would have to do more than drop gaudy leaflets to make an impression upon the defenders.

Germany Reported Massing Troops for Attack upon Turkey

JERUSALEM, March 26 (AP) — German troops available in all the Balkan countries have been concentrated in Bulgaria and Greece, where the Germans are "feverishly preparing to attack Turkey the beginning of April," reputedly well-informed Balkan circles reported tonight.

Hitler even has recalled the last three German divisions which had been kept in Yugoslavia for a year and has dispatched them to Turkish borders, these sources said.

It was reported further that Hitler had compelled the Croatian government to call all classes from 1887 to 1913 to the colors tomorrow, ordering death as the penalty for disobeying the conscription call.

James A. Gish, plant superintendent, said there was no way to determine the cause of the explosion, but that he was confident there was no sabotage. Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation from Philadelphia and the State Department of Labor and Industry began an immediate investigation.

A large part of the company's operations are being devoted to war production.

Cause Is Mystery

Gish said it was possible that something dropped on the explosive from an airplane which he was informed flew over the quarry just before the blast. Coroner David F. Bachman theorized the dynamite might have been touched off as it was being placed in holes by the workmen.

"Bodies were scattered around for an eighth of a mile," said William Miller, 38, fire chief from nearby Nazareth and one of the first officials to reach the scene.

"I saw a leg here or an arm there. They were terribly mangled."

Leonard Sabatino, owner of a coal company just across a highway from the scene, "declared "it was a terrible sight."

"Bodies were strewn all around. The bodies were just left lying where they were thrown until the coroner arrived."

School Building Wrecked

Seventy children in the Lehigh consolidated school half a mile away were just beginning classes when the explosion occurred. All windowns in the two-room building were broken. A dozen pupils and both teachers were injured but only two children were detained at a hospital.

Two explosive experts and a salesman, all employes of the Hercules Power Company, were among the dead. George B. Hadesty, Jr., of Allentown, a veteran of twenty-five years experience, was killed as he sat in a car near the quarry. The others were Ernest Ray Garpett, 41, of Wilmington, Del., blasting superintendent, and William Lanhan, 33, of Bronxville, N. Y., the salesman.

Teacher, Flogged

Danny left the schoolroom a short time later and returned in a few minutes with his parents.

Miss Davis said Mrs. Leslie entered the schoolroom followed closely by Danny. She said Danny pointed to other children in the room and said, "she did hit me, didn't she?"

Miss Davis said there was a chorus of "noes" from the other pupils and that Danny replied, "aw, she did too."

With that Mrs. Leslie advanced toward her, the teacher said, and began striking her with the belt. The first two blows struck the side of her body and seven others struck her on the bare arm.

Miss Davis described the blows as being "very hard."

Arm Badly Bruised

"My arm was badly bruised and was bleeding in three places," she testified.

Miss Davis said she made no attempt to fight back. She said she was forced to remain away from school several days.

On cross-examination, Miss Davis said she is working for her master's degree in psychology at Purdue University and expressed the opinion she was "more competent that the ordinary person to diagnose sanity."

A plea of temporary insanity has been entered for Mrs. Leslie.

"Mrs. Leslie was engaged in a purposeful activity," Miss Davis said. "She knew what she was doing."

active anti-trust division, this sort of thing isn't going to happen again."

He estimated that Standard Oil's loss of its control over the patents involved would cost the company $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

The anti-trust chief told the committee that the case against Standard Oil was only "a dramatic illustration" of "the larger story."

"There is," he declared, "essentially no difference between what the Standard Oil of New Jersey has done in this case and what other companies did in restricting the production of magnesium, aluminum, tungsten carbide, drugs, dye stuffs and a variety of other critical materials for the war."

He called cartel arrangements between American and foreign firms "the very center of our failure to produce basic materials."

Sought Only Control

"These (synthetic rubber) arrangements," Arnold said, "were not entered into with any desire to aid or assist Germany. The sole motive was an attempt on the part of the Standard Oil to get a protected market and to eliminate independent competition, and finally to restrict production in world markets in order to maintain that control."

Arnold said that an agreement on exchange of patents and division of world markets was entered in between Standard Oil and I. G. Farben in 1929 and revised in September of 1939, after which it was adhered to by the American company even though the Germans did not reciprocate.

"At the direction of the German interests," Arnold testified, "Standard Oil refused to license independent producers in the United States for the production of synthetic rubber.

Got Nothing in Return

"It turned over all its discoveries to Germany even though Germany declined to give them anything in return. The effect of this arrangement continued during the war and up to a time shortly before the filing of the information and the decree against Standard Oil x x x

"Standard Oil delayed the use of Buna rubber (processed with the use of coal) in this country because the Hitler government did not wish to have this rubber exploited here for military reasons. Standard delayed the introduction of Buna rubber even after it had received permission from I. G. Farben to make suitable arrangements. It is even more astonishing that on Standard's own development, namely Butyl (the petroleum gas process), Standard has refused to license all but two rubber companies, with the exception of some specialty companies."

Arnold said the cost of Butyl rubber had been estimated by Standard at between seven and fifteen cents per pound compared with approximately twenty cents per pound for natural rubber.

"Then Standard developed synthetic rubber in this country that was cheaper and more plentiful than Germany had?" Hugh A. Fulton, counsel for the investigating committee asked.

"That's right," Arnold replied.

"And turned it over to Germany?" Fulton inquired.

"That's right," was again the reply.

"And not to our rubber companies?"

"That's right."

Dr. Lewis J. Richards of the AVG loaded Swartz into a jeep and started across the field to the hospital with Japanese bullets kicking up the dust behind him. This gave other AVG members an opportunity to remove Fauth and Seiple. Fauth died of his wounds on Sunday.

Besides the A.V.G. assault on Moulmein last Thursday, RAF pilots flew their Blenheims through a twenty-minute gale of Japanese fighter fire to attack an airfield outside captured Rangoon on Friday.

The British airmen dropped bombs from 1,000 feet on some thirty Japanese grounded craft which they destroyed or damaged. Not a single Blenheim was lost.

British Airmen in Action

Several escorting Hurricane fighters went along on this raid and shot down six Japanese fighters. One Hurricane pilot went down—but only in a crash landing due to spent fuel. The pilot hitch-hiked back to his lines.

The A.V.G. base, however, was attacked again on Sunday, by at least 180 Japanese planes, and this time Jernstedt and Dupuoy, John Rossi of San Francisco, Cliff Groh of Chicago, Bob Prescott of Fort Worth, and Fred Hodges of Memphis were unable to get their Tomahawk planes off the ground.

One of the American pilots said he had noticed "orange-robed priests strolling by the field" before the attacks.

"These natives, with parasoles on their shoulders, watched every bit of activity at our field, and we got the impression there were many traitors in the adjoining villages which most civilians had evacuated."

(A Junking dispatch Wednesday said the A.V.G. pilots and mechanics salvaged damaged planes and moved on to another base by truck.)

Strike Is Ended Against Feldstein Metal Company

A three-day strike of seven women at the Feldstein Iron and Metal Company which started Tuesday morning ended yesterday when a conciliator of the United States Department of Labor effected an agreement between the company and the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Local 453, AFofL on wage demands.

According to C. E. Stutzman, business agent of the union, increases in pay ranging from $1 to $7.50 a week were granted the men. In addition a forty-hour week instead of a forty-eight hour week previously in force will be observed.

The contract is retroactive to March 16 and the seven men will resume their work this morning, Stutzman said. James Holden of the Department of Labor, conciliated the dispute. F. Brooke Whiting, attorney, represented the company.

core," Harrison said, recalling his country's participation in the first World war. "No sacrifice — money, men, materials or labor was too great. We had but to name a quota, whatever the drive, and every county and community in the state would go over the top."

"Then as now," he declared, "the state administration had foreseen the storm and had taken steps to meet it. Then as now, we had to arouse our people to the true exigencies and needs of the war, to explain to them the sacrifices that would be called upon to make.

"They failed at first to appreciate the necessity of a draft, and while most of them were willing to lend and everything in the defense of their country, they did not fully understand the necessity of sending our boys abroad."

The aging democratic leader, bed-ridden in his office after an illness of several weeks, declared "I am confident that under the leadership of Governor O'Conor that Maryland will do her full part and stand behind President Roosevelt in all efforts for final victory."

State Republicans Bestir Themselves

CONSIDERABLE ACTIVITY among Maryland Republican leaders looking to the fall elections is reported by the Baltimore Sun. They are sounding out possible candidacies for the gubernatorial and congressional races, according to that newspaper, which says those prominently mentioned for the former include Tasker G. Lowndes, of this city; Galen L. Tait, long-time state chairman of the party and candidate for the party senatorial nomination in 1938; Robert O. Bonnell, Baltimore banker, and W. Frank Roberts, industrialist and chairman of the Maryland Council of Defense.

All good men, indeed. As for congressional timber, the Sun article reported aspirants as scarce at present, only three names having been mentioned within its hearing, these being in its immediate vicinity, with a "deep silence" obtaining elsewhere in the state.

But, while there may be no avowed congressional candidacies as yet, there is ample good timber available and it is being thoughtfully considered as was pointed out in a recent discussion of Western Maryland possibilities reported in the News and the Hagerstown Morning Herald. In this, by the way, Mr. Tait was included, not as a gubernatorial candidate, but as a congressional possibility by reason of his residence in Montgomery county, which is in the Sixth district.

One thing reported by the Baltimore newspaper is especially gratifying to the News, this being the efforts that are being made to heal old factional sores for the solidification of party harmony and the development of a united front within the party. Mr. Tait was said to have been conspicuous in these efforts, in which respect Republicans hereabout can employ the old saying of "more power to him." Herein this newspaper hopes others will follow suit.

Republican leaders of the state should continue these discussions of possible candidacies and trot out the best, even if they have to be drafted as the News remarked in connection with the mention of J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, as a likely Sixth district runner.

This should be done for the obvious reason that Maryland citizens, in common with the rest of the country, are not at all satisfied with the way things have been going, as was recently noted by the News in connection with a report on a tour of the country made by national Democratic leaders given by Pearson and Allen, the Washington correspondents.

For the benefit of any who may not have noted that, it may be said that the Democratic leaders found things not at all rosy for the party in power because of widespread dissatisfaction, resentment and even "anger" among the people generally.

After State Moneys

IT IS to be regretted that the states have to make a fight for their identity at a time when the whole country should be applying its strength to the war effort. The current assault on the states is the bill to relieve war industries and contractors from payment of gross income, sales, use and similar taxes which the states have been forced to levy in order to keep up their contributions to federal projects.

Recently the federal government tried to get its hands on the states' share of the unemployment compensation fund reserve. The federal government wanted it to pay unemployment compensation to persons who lost their jobs in the transformation of industries to war purposes. But it tried to use the emergency to get full and permanent control of this state money.

The bill to deprive the states of taxes on war orders is an unfair, untimely and probably an unconstitutional subterfuge for advancing the extinction of the states. It should be defeated and it should be the last of these attempts to reduce the states to mere geographical units.

Intolerable War Profiteering

EDMUND TOLAND, counsel for the House Naval Affairs committee, has reported that a sample survey of fifteen companies handling naval contracts have shown excessive increases of salaries and bonuses for their officials. Representative Gore, of Tennessee, has presented another list of what he calls "scandalous" increases in corporation salaries and bonuses wherein he charges that the government is being "filched and robbed."

Such things, if true, are intolerable and the Congress and officials should hasten to put a stop to the means and methods whereby they are made possible. The outstanding scandalous revelation of bilking the government—and the taxpayers—is the case of the Jack and Heintz, Inc., war plant at Cleveland, where enormous salaries and bonuses were handed around among officers and favorites with fantastic prodigality amounting to what appears to be plain malversation—one secretary getting $39,356 last year and $18,295 for the first ten weeks of this year.

Now the Jack and Heintz company is out with a contrite and unctuous statement that "voluntary" limitation of profits to six per cent are to be made in the future and drastic salary reductions for the company's three top executives.

But, is that sufficient unto the evil thereof? What about restitution to the government in view of the evident purpose of scattering these profits around to avoid payment of the higher bracket excess profits taxes? What about just penalties for thus evading income tax payments even though they were evaded within the letter of the law although contravening its purpose? A lot of fellows have been fined big sums and put in federal prisons for income tax evasions.

There should be no profiteering anywhere in this war emergency and both officials and legislators should see to it, and quickly, that it is not permitted.

Gen. Johnson's Idea About Oil Barges

WHEN Gen. Hugh S. Johnson first began talking about the use of river barges as a means of helping to cope with the oil shortage in the East, a lot of people thought he sounded off key. But, Johnson has been sticking to his guns and continues to maintain that there would be no oil shortage in the East, or not much, if the barges were used.

How that would aid the situation is pointed out by the Cincinnati Times-Star in approving a similar suggestion made by Gen. Lytle Brown, former chief of the army engineers, in view of the heavy losses of tankers making the long journey from Texas and the northern parts of South America around Florida and up through Atlantic waters to eastern seaboard cities.

"The Mississippi has a thirty-foot channel as far north as Baton Rouge," the Times-Star explains. "Hither the tankers could come, and then transship their cargoes by barges and towboats, which could carry the oil through dependable nine-foot channels to inland ports on the Mississippi, the Missouri and the Ohio. Thence rail tank-cars could distribute it in short hauls to any part of the country. Tankers from South America, following the same route, would be open to U-boat attack for only about half the distance entailed by all-sea transportation.

"While transshipment costs time and money and railroad freight rates are higher than water rates, the procedure suggested is no stranger to Cincinnati. Coal comes down here in barges from the Kanawha valley, is loaded on freight cars and shipped to all parts of the country. Some West Virginia coal has three rides, reaching Huntington by railroad and Cincinnati by barge and then going on by railroad.

"After the first World war, our inland waterways were improved for just such service. Why not avail of them and cut down current losses of ships, oil and men?"

Johnson's idea doesn't seem so crazy after all.

If the Germans continue that retreat much longer those grand old headline twins, Minsk and Pinsk, may soon be back on the front page.

The national debt objective is now $125,000,000,000 and at the rate it is going Congress will not be long in reaching it.

It would seem that the best way to pull those big buck teeth of the Jap would be by a pincers movement.

The Ancient Grass

By MARSHALL MASLIN

You're old, you're stale, you're disillusioned. You're tired, you've seen everything, done everything, thought everything through.

Marshall Maslin

You're 16 or 60—I don't know which—and you can't see much ahead.

You don't BELIEVE there is anything lovely around the turn in the road. You've decided that you are old—older than the crumbling sphinx. You smile condescendingly at the great Sequoias? Big vegetables? What do THEY know about life? Where have they been—just standing still all this time in one place, just getting bigger and bigger, never growing taller, never learning anything.

YOU are the Old One, you are the unhappy wise one, you are the ancient creature—old in the mind and old in the heart—wishing you could be young again, but glad you will never again be forced to travel through the pains and perplexities of Youth.

I know how it is. We've all been there. We've all put on the Dunce's Cap and sat in the corner, thinking we are older than the granite hills—firmly convinced that the upkeep of life is greater than its turn-in value.

But you and I and all of us are rebuked by the green grass on the hills in the spring. Those hills that were so bare and brown only a few weeks ago and are now so gently, happily green. Spring comes and it's hardly a week before the tender green arrives—before the small green shoots appear on the gaunt flanks of the hills.

Arrived? Appeared? No, the green grass was ALWAYS there. It was there in the cold autumn sun, it was there in the dry discouraging days.

The green grass has always been there, all these thousands of centuries. And that green grass is not new, not young—it is OLD, older than the Sequoias, older than grief, than self-pity, than your unhappiness, older than you have ever felt. It leaps forth when the rains come, it waves in the summer breeze, it pales and dries away. It does not die but leaves ITSELF in seed on the slopes of the hills, to wait till the rains come again.

And you, compared with that green grass, are the youngest creature in the world. You are dry grass, you think, but what a foolish thought is that! You are not dying, you are merely WAITING for the rain of hope to come to you again. And while you wait, you are most wickedly, most foolishly unhappy.

Little child that is man, be half as wise as the ancient grass.

Work of Elders In the New Draft Rests on Returns

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, March 26—The precise nature of this coming 45 to 64 draft registration of manpower for civil duties outside the army will probably remain unexplained until after it is concluded.

Gen. Hershey

Draft Brig. Gen. Hershey has been making a speech a day about this phase and others for nearly two weeks. But he always speaks off his cuff, never from a prepared manuscript and no stenographic notes are kept, at least not at his headquarters.

There the piecemeal news accounts are pasted in a scrap book as a record. All these clippings show is that Gen. Hershey expects a full mobilization of manpower (quantity and quality unspecified) for all kinds of industrial jobs (likewise unspecified).

Industry, reading these accounts in the papers, has become somewhat apprehensive lest the government turn itself into a gigantic transfer agency to shift most people from the work they are doing into something else, with all the implications of socializing, salary-changing, business destroying (in some lines), business building (in some lines) that might be conjured from such an apprehension. I do not believe this is justified.

Returns To Determine

What the officials behind the draft seem to have in mind is based on need for the long range future. They cannot say what they will do until the returns show them what they can do. At present there is no need for this type of draftee.

But about nine months from now, they foresee the possibility that there will be a shortage of soldiers of production, mainly mechanics, electricians, draftsmen, machine operators of various types. They want to find out now what they have available to meet such a need when it arises.

A fair idea of the needs they expect is furnished by the questionnaire to be distributed to the current batch of draft registrants (36 to 44 and 20-21). On that published list, the citizen is asked to designate what previous experience he has had along a couple of hundred (mostly mechanical) lines. The upper age brackets in this class too, face a call for non-military duty, and eventually all who are not in military service.

Simple Work Planned

You will not escape just because you are not mechanically minded. They plan to invite you to run a bus or truck or give you some simple occupation like night watchman in a tank factory, if you are not otherwise fitted, and the need develops.

Certainly, however, they will be limited by the number of empty jobs and in a general way by aptitudes of the draftees. Above all, an act of Congress will be required to enable anyone to be drafted for other duty than in the army. The law now is restricted to that purpose.

My personal impression is these obvious limitations will prevent the effects of industrial drafting from falling upon a great number of people, certainly upon far fewer than the draft for military service, although any opinion about this requires longer distanced vision than anyone enjoys these days.

New Agency Likely

A new agency of government will probably be established for this manpower mobilization. It is not likely to be in charge of any of those so far mentioned, Madame Perkins, Sidney Hillman, Gen. Hershey or Paul McNutt.

Miss Perkins naturally thinks it should be in the Labor department and McNutt has been working on the assumption it is a question of public welfare. Varying degrees of conflict have arisen between these four, which precludes the possibility that any of them will handle it.

Press Worries Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt is looking daggers at the press again, the sharpest of them being off the record. An erroneous report in one paper that Ambassador Winant might head the manpower mobilization set-up is the only apparent thing that roused his interest the wrong way.

But his displeasure became known at a time when the labor issue was rising in Congress and the press. He leveled off the congressional upswing somewhat by having his leaders (except Thurman Arnold) testify there against labor legislation, but many sections of the press kept rising.

Contradicts Himself

The president appeared to contradict himself somewhat when he concluded the press has not as much power over public opinion as it formerly enjoyed. This is probably true. People today are better educated to the issues of the day and seem increasingly inclined to do their thinking independently.

Yet if this is correct, Mr. Roosevelt may have misguided the labor objections he has heard from Congress or read in the press. If these were superficial criticisms limited to these two authorities, then they can easily be dissipated by counter-pressure.

But if Congress and the press are reflecting and reporting the sentiments of a great number of people, the criticism cannot be stopped even if Congress and the press were subdued.

MacArthur Should Get a Decent Break From His Admirers, Hugh Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, March 26—May heaven save Douglas MacArthur from his loving friends.

Hugh S. Johnson

The Australian request for his services as the clock of doom registers the eleventh hour and the fifty-ninth minute tends to make him personally responsible for what the president says is — "everything from here to Singapore." This is all messed up with some kind of British empire politics involving Mr. Curtin and Mr. Churchill.

On top of this some little American groups are forming under the slogan "MacArthur for President" which tend to push him, willy-nilly into American politics.

The tendency of all this is to entangle our feet more deeply in some kind of war mess involving, as it now begins to appear, conflicting and very complex wishes or aspirations of Britain, Australia, Canada and perhaps India.

Can't Submerge Ourselves

Even as a loyal selfless ally we can't be altogether under British tutelage. We can't submerge the whole of our interests or accept responsibilities for matters which we do not and cannot control.

India and China both apparently feel entitled to independence if the war is won and if they help to win it. Indeed, if the "four freedoms" meant anything they must have meant something like that.

And yet if the war is won, will Britain be content to see such a subdivision of the empire? And if she be not content, are we at last to learn that we have been fighting and sacrificing to give the Malayans back to the Dutch, the East Indians to the English, and the Chinese to their semi-sovereignty under alien concessions?

MacArthur's "supreme command of everything east of Singapore" is a sort of symbol of some such position as that into which he is being dragged—and with him our own independence of action to both our East and our West.

Not a Magician

What does supreme command mean if joint inter-Allied boards independent of MacArthur are to say what supplies and forces he is to be given with which to fight his battle?

The plaudits he has so justly won by doing so much with so little have left a sort of impression that he is a military magician who can do anything with nothing.

Of course, he is no such thing. He is among the tops of soldiers in all history, but even that is not enough. He is no miracle monger.

His job is to reconquer a quarter of the globe half a world away in distance. He can no more do that without a vast supply of men and materials than Napoleon could have done it from his prison island of St. Helena.

Frittered Fame

If he fails to do it (as he must fail without adequate supplies) his heroically-won fame will be frittered away.

If we do not see to it that he has adequate supplies, we shall be accused of not meeting the vast responsibilities into which we have somehow been euchered and now find ourselves and, worst of all, will be seriously hampered and threatened on our Atlantic and European front.

The loving friends, admirers and even idolators of MacArthur's are thus doing him and the country no service by over-emphasizing his genius and paying too little heed to the dread considerations mentioned here. Those who go further, at this crisis, to push him toward domestic politics, are doing him an ever worse service.

History Forgotten

They do not remember the history of our country or General Winfield Scott, who was refused command in Mexico by President Polk in favor of Zachary Taylor, because Scott was a presidential aspirant—refused that command while the MacArthur-like victories of old Rough and Ready made him a popular idol. Then Scott was put forward in an unsuccessful attempt to destroy Taylor.

They forget the political fight that prolonged the Civil war. They forget that MacArthur is neither a politician nor a Democrat— much less a New Dealer. Why can't we give at least one American soldier a clean break?

(Distributed by United Features Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

So What?

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Mr. Roosevelt told the Washington correspondents the other day that, according to figures furnished him by the National Safety Council, 460,000,000 man days of productive effort were lost during 1941 because of industrial accidents, 160,000,000 man days because of the common cold and all other types of respiratory ailments, and only 30,000,000 man days because of strikes.

We can conceive of no purpose of linking lost time from strikes with lost time from illness and accidents other than the belittlement of the strike as a factor in slowing down war production.

Far from excusing the strike, a proper appreciation of the facts here revealed would render it less defensible. If American industrial workers lose 620,000,000 hours of employment involuntarily during the course of a year, that fact is all the more argument for their remaining on the job when they are able to work. Because homicide claims fewer victims than does pneumonia are we to condone murder?

U-Boat Sinkings Are Solidifying Latin America

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Germany is doing almost more than we ourselves are doing in the interest of Pan-American good neighborliness. Rio de Janeiro's recent outbreak of anti-Nazi rioting was an evidence of the trend. What's anti-Nazi in that part of the world is pro-United States. Except for its German population, which is large in some areas, Brazil never has been overly fond of the Reich. Still, it took the U-boat sinking of a Brazilian ship to stir the inhabitants of the southern republic's metropolis and capital up to the point of sacking German shops and kicking resident Germans personally around. And Herr Hitler provided the U-boat.

Charles P. Stewart

He sank a Uruguayan ship and another bound for Chile from New York. Riots followed in the capitals of both countries.

Have Little Shipping

The Caribbean countries haven't got much shipping of their own, but they don't like U-boats in their waters, for the beastly subs imperil other nations' vessels, in which the Caribbean folk are trying to market their products, mostly here in the United States, thus raising Cain with their export trade.

In short, Adolf is solidifying the whole Latin American east coast with us against the Axis leadership.

It will be up to us to keep Western Hemispherical good neighborliness going after the war's over and not let it lapse, as it did after the last one, but I surmise that we realize its value more fully now than we did then, and won't repeat our previous blundering, for it was all our fault before. The Latins know we can, if we'll try, make it profitable to them to be chummy with Uncle Sam.

One Weakness

Taking it as a total Pan-American proposition, there's one weakness in the Fuehrer's U-boat campaign to solidify our entire hemisphere.

He obviously cannot get his subs through the Panama canal or around Cape Horn, to play smash with west coastal shipping as he's doing on the east coast. Consequently he isn't antagonizing republics like Chile, Peru and Ecuador to the same extent that he's accomplishing it on the Atlantic and Caribbean side. They're not antipathetic toward us, but some U-boat stimulation is needed to start them outright anti-Nazi rioting.

Properly speaking, the Pacific coast ought to be attended to by Japan.

The Japs probably aren't strong on submarines, but they could send over a plane carrier or two and drop some bombs on such ports as Buenaventura, Guayaquil, Lima and Valparaiso, or even a bit inland, like Quito and Santiago. If that didn't set them rioting, I'm no judge.

Too Busy at Home

The trouble with the Japs is that they're too busy in the southwestern Pacific to bother with our side of the ocean, though I'd think Adolf Hitler might remind them that, despite his preoccupation in Europe, he can spare a few subs for western Atlantic activities, so why can't the Mikado assign a flock of planes to the eastern Pacific edge?.

The Japs, though, undoubtedly do have an exceptionally mean situation to deal with in their particular war era.

I heard a story about it the other day.

It appears, according to this yarn, that native cannibals in the Dutch East Indies, for instance, Java and Borneo, are making a practice of catching Japs and eating them.

The Japs, it is stated, are tired of it, and propose to establish a system of rationing.

Benefits To Come

But, returning to the original theme—

It's a pest to have Nazi U-boats operating all the way from Norfolk, Va., to the mouth of the Rio de la Plata, yet it's lining up those republics' sentiment alongside Uncle Samuel in a fashion that will prove positively very beneficial to him in years to come, if he doesn't muff his chance again.

I think he won't. It's marvelous how fat-headed he has been hitherto, but maybe experience will have taught him something this time.

It's HIS experience. Experience takes with a guy who's had it, though not with anybody who hasn't. I knew a little verse on the subject once:

"He had a gem of wondrous light,
Its rays would pierce the deepest night,
Experience, his jewel!
Before his mortal race was run,
He tried to give it to his son.
'Twas scornfully rejected.
He tried to give it to the world,
And every lip disdainful curled.
And none the gift respected.
Experience, his jewel!"

They're getting it jammed down their throats now, though.

Victory Hobbies

How War Production Can Be Helped Is Noted by Magazine Writer

If you own or operate machine tools as a hobby you can help defense production—and get paid for it, according to an article on "Home Workshops Go to War," in The Reader's Digest for April. Many hobbyists now are using lathes in basements and garages for producing machine parts and other high precision work says Arthur Grahame, author of the article.

These basement subcontractors were first called to arms by Stanley Carlson, a small machinery manufacturer in New Jersey, who needed additional machine tools to fill excess orders for airplane, gun and bombsight parts. His own plants and machinery, and all subcontractors in the region were working almost beyond capacity. A solution to his problem presented itself in the person of one of his machinists whose hobby involved a lathe and a basement workshop. By working at home, at Carlson's suggestion, this machinist released his lathe at the plant for additional output. Hobbyist friends of the machinist offered to help him in his work, and presently this idea mushroomed out to other home-workshop owners. Today, Grahame says about 150 men give full or part time to work farmed out by Carlson.

The subcontractors working in their basements and garages have a lower percentage of rejections for faulty craftsmanship than the men in his plant, says Carlson. One of the best of these "converted" hobbyists was a lace importer when the war started. Another made scientific apparatus for a university; and another is a foreman in a food products plant who works 25 additional hours a week on airplane tools in his basement shop.

The Home Workshop Subcontracting Plan has proved to effective that the government is introducing it all over the coumntry.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)

DOUBLE DIGGING FOR VICTORY VEGETABLES

While double digging may seem so laborious a task for some beginning gardeners, it is the secret of the English gardens and prize-winning vegetables in our own land. As illustrated in the Garden-graph, in the process of double digging the soil is moved to a depth of two spades or forks. By this means the soil is better aerated and roots can penetrate more easily.

Start at one end of the plot and open out a trench two feet long and one-spade-depth deep. Wheel this soil to the other end of the plot. With a large fork break up the subsoil in the trench (another fork depth), incorporating with it manure, decayed refuse or anything which will help to improve the soil. Turn the next two feet of soil over into this trench, leaving a second trench open. Thus the soil is broken to two-spades depth with the original layer of soil still kept on top.

The people of Arakan follow old greeting customs. If they meet in the street, they take off their sandals to denote pleasure at seeing each other. In the house stockings must be removed as a sign of greeting.

It is estimated that this year the navy's bluejackets will sit in dentists chairs for 80,000 fillings in San Diego, Calif., alone.

Good Girls Can Be Popular, Says Beatrice Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX—Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"I belong to a family of what some people might call 'old-fashioned folks'," writes Claire. "My mother and dad have been married over twenty years and they're still in love with each other. There never have been any divorces in our family—when we're married, it's for keeps. Mother has brought us up to be clean-minded and taught us that, when we marry, we shouldn't go to our new homes as hardened and experienced women.

"When I went to college, about two years ago, I was amazed at the point of view of some of my classmates. Some had had a great deal of experience and they all agreed that a girl couldn't be innocent and also popular. This was a terrible shock to me. I'd like to know what you think about this," the letter concludes.

Genuinely Puzzled

As a rule, when a girl asks me whether it's possible for a girl to be both modern and innocent, she sends a stamped and self-addressed envelope because she's had some bitter personal experience which must be kept confidential. More than likely she's come from a line of women who have been "good" in the old-fashioned sense and she is genuinely puzzled to know that "good" girls aren't always popular.

Now comes the above letter from a girl who wants an answer through my column. Everyone knows there's a deplorable lack of morals in the world at present. Whatever it was that made this, nothing is gained by closing your eyes and saying it doesn't exist.

These classmates of yours, Claire, make me think of patients suffering from jaundice; they see yellow and the whole world looks yellow to them. My dear child, such beliefs are not universal, any more than smallpox, conflagrations or floods are universal. Choose your friends from homes such as the one in which you have grown up.

Must Think of Marriage

Some day you'll marry, and the man you marry must be of decent principles and ideals who will give you a home like your mother's and father's. That sort of man doesn't want a wife who has led an irregular life. Even if he marries you, knowing about your past experiences, the spectre would always be there. Human nature being what it is, the chances are that he would never quite trust you.

"A short life and merry one" may be the motto for girls whose life roots are as shallow as the weeds that spring up in a public highway, but not for a girl who comes from a home such as yours.

Retirement Pay and Tax

Dear Miss Fairfax:

As the divorced wife of an ex-service man, I should like to know if his retirement pay is subject to income tax.

ALIMONY WIFE.

The retirement pay of a soldier, whether he's retired from disability or age, is taxable under the Income Tax Law. The pension of a Spanish-American War veteran or a Veteran of Foreign Wars is not taxable.

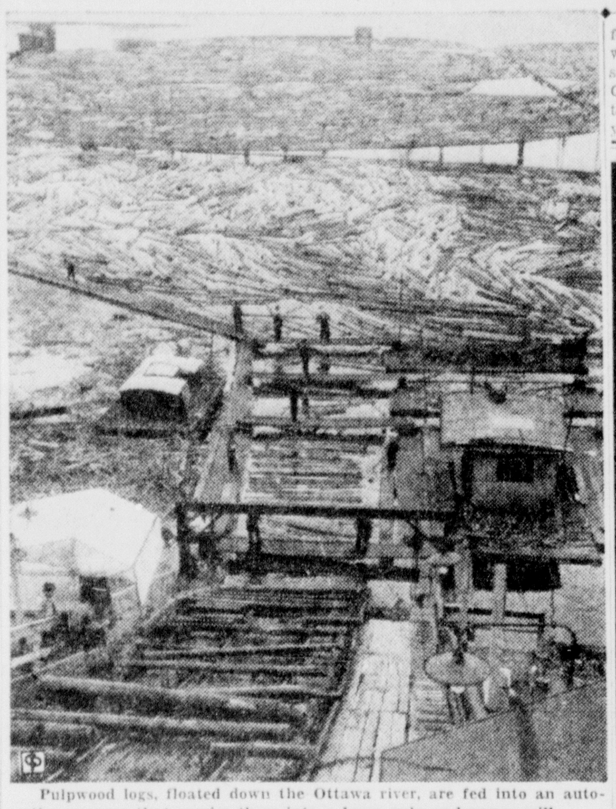
FORESTS OF CANADA PROVIDE PAPER FOR DEMOCRACY'S NEWS IN FACE OF GREAT OBSTACLES



Pulpwood logs, floated down the Ottawa river, are fed into an automatic conveyor that carries them into a large pulp and paper mill.

By HORACE DONALD CRAWFORD
Central Press Writer

OTTAWA, March 26—Canada's forests are providing newsprint for presses of the fighting democracies. They are yielding vast quantities of lumber for airport hangars and for camps of the armed forces in Canada, Great Britain and the United States. Canada's forests are fighting the Axis.

Japanese residents are being removed from the forested coastal areas of British Columbia, and Canadian lumberjacks are cutting and hauling logs for the sawmills, pulp mills and paper mills of the vast dominion.

Along rugged mountain slopes of British Columbia, among evergreen hills of Ontario and Quebec, and through forests of the Atlantic-bordering maritimes, axes are swinging, saws are screaming, and men of the forests and the mills are producing lumber and pulpwood to aid war efforts of the United Nations.

Largest Newsprint Producer

War has not changed Canada's status as the largest newsprint producer in the world, but war has greatly increased the significance of that fact. Last year 71 per cent of the newsprint produced on the North American continent rolled from Canadian paper mills. The United States provided 21 per cent and the remaining 8 per cent came from Newfoundland.

Manpower presents the major problem facing producers of Canadian forest products because so many men have entered the armed forces or have left the bush camps to work in war industries turning out tanks, munitions, airplanes and other weapons of mechanized war.

Canada's timber controller, A. S. Nicholson, recently announced the appointment of an assistant, Major W. A. Delahey of Toronto, to take charge of pulpwood. Prices are being rigorously controlled in Canada, but these ceilings do not apply to exports. Delahey has also been appointed deputy administrator of pulpwood on the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

War emphasizes the value of the newspaper as a vital factor in the life of democracies. It also makes people realize the value of paper on which to print them. More than 80 per cent of Canada's exported papers are newsprint. Canadians will tell you that more than half the newspapers of the western hemisphere are printed on Canadian newsprint. Since the war cut off pulpwood and paper supplies from Norway, Sweden, Finland and other European nations, the free nations have turned more and more to the vast forest resources of Canada.

Aim for Efficiency

Canadian pulp and paper mills are striving to meet the challenge. Last year they spent some $4,000,000 improving their equipment. They are working out ways to improve efficiency. Some have installed coal-burning boilers to save hydro-electric power.

Besides meeting increased demands for newsprint, Canada's paper mills have been called upon to produce numerous special papers for war purposes, such as wrapping papers for munitions. They are also producing large quantities of paperboard for use in the construction of air raid shelters and army camps.

Producers of finer papers are reducing the range of sizes, colors and weights. Standards of some papers are lowered because the chemicals necessary to attain highest qualities are now needed in war production.

Canada and the United States are co-operating in an effort to assure a continued supply of paper at a stable price. Both nations are seeking to prevent a repetition of the skyrocketing inflation that after the last war sent the price of Canadian newsprint well over $100 a ton.

Some Canadian operators hope to increase their pulpwood supply by working men in the woods through the summer. Ordinarily this is a winter job only, one that is ended when spring thaws open streams so logs cut during the winter can be floated downstream to the mills.

Paper-making in Canada is no recent development. It goes back, in fact, to 1803, when the first paper mill was established at St. Andrews, Quebec. Ontario was then know as Upper Canada, and the first paper mill in this province was built in 1813 near the present city of Hamilton. Maritime provinces began paper-making in 1819 when a mill was built at Bedford Basin, near Halifax.

Rags Formerly Used

Wood-pulp was not used in paper-making in Canada before the 1860's, however, as these earlier papers were made from rags.

North America's first wood-grinder was built at Valleyfield, Quebec, in 1866, and began making wood-pulp by the mechanical process. Chemical processes were developed at the same time, however, for a chemical mill for producing wood-pulp was established that same year at Windsor Mills, Quebec. Canada's confederation took place the following year, in 1867, just 75 years ago, and since then the pulpwood and paper production of Canada has developed to a major industry.

Men of Canada's forests and mills are engaged in vital production, for even a mechanized war cannot be fought without forest products.

The WPB Conservation Order Does Not Affect Men's Suits Made Prior to March 30, 1942

We'd like to clear up any confusion that may exist about the men's clothing in our spring display.

The Pearl Harbor incident did not occur until December 7, consequently the styles of the suits now in our store have not been affected in any way.

Our suits are all wool. Our double breasted suits carry vests. Pleated trousers still are available. Coats are generously long. Some carry patch pockets. Cuffs are permissible but only up to March 30.

We repeat . . . the WPB Conservation Order, except that section referring to cuffs on trousers, applies only to clothing put into process of manufacture March 30, 1942, and after.

And so you'll find our stocks just as complete and varied as any we have ever presented . . . with prices only moderately higher than a year ago.

The distance from home plate to left field in Griffith stadium, Washington, is 402 feet, and the distance to the left-field wall in Detroit's Briggs stadium is 340. The sixty-two feet of difference may mean a lot to Jim Bloodworth, second baseman acquired by the Tigers from Washington, for he hit many long balls that were easy outs in Washington and would have been homers in Briggs Stadium.

Louis and Simon Ring Battle Will Go on the Air

Mutual Network Schedules Fight at Madison Square Garden

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, March 26—It's big fight time again Friday night. Or in other words, another Joe Louis battle in the Madison Square Garden ring. Joe, now a private in the army, is battling Abe Simon, the man who went thirteen rounds in their previous meeting.

Don Dunphy, of MBS, will be on hand with his microphone at 10 o'clock to give listeners all the details. Also there will be short waving so that soldiers no matter where they are stationed can hear either by direct or delayed rebroadcasts.

Guest Is Booked

Kate Smith's guest for her variety hour on CBS at 8 is to be Madeleine Carroll as Tommy Riggs and his Betty Lou continue as a regular feature of the broadcast.

Frederick March and his wife, Florence Eldridge are to appear in "Goodbye Mr. Chips" for the Friday night playhouse of CBS at 9.

The Philadelphia orchestra, for its weekly 2:30 concert on MBS, will include Verdi's Requiem mass, with accompaniment by three choral groups.

Songs for Marching Men, the MBS martial music series, is shifting to Fridays at 8:30 from Thursday nights.

Col. Stoopnagle, in his BLUE broadcast from Toronto expects Kenny Baker, at 7 o'clock.

Local Man Donates 15 Classical Records To School Board

The Allegany County Board of Education is the recipient of four albums containing fifteen classical red seal Victor records, presented yesterday to Charles L. Kopp, superintendent, by Francis H. Oldaker, of Winfield road.

"I will be called for army service soon and I hope you will accept these records for circulation in the schools," Oldaker told Kopp.

The collection includes Schubert Symphony No. 8 in B Minor; Tschaikowsky Symphony No. 6 in B Minor; Tschaikowski Concerto No. 1 in B Flat Minor and Tschaikowsky Nutcracker Suite.

Fort Hill Physical Education Department To Stage Exhibition

A public exhibition will be given by the physical education department of Fort Hill high school tonight at 8 o'clock in the new gymnasium.

The program will consist of tumbling, wrestling, dancing and feats of athletic ability and will be climaxed by a parade of sports captains.

John J. Long is chairman of the program. John J. Cavanaugh, Miss Beatrice Lowe and Mrs. Leonore Resser are planning and staging the exhibition, the theme of which is "Physical Fitness for Victory."

Officers Speak At Meeting of First Aid Class

Using local incidents to enliven their lecture and demonstration on the use of the respirator-inhalator, City Officers James J. Condon and John G. Powers spoke to the adult first aid class which met Wednesday in Carver high school.

The class, which meets every Monday and Wednesday evening, has completed the study of bandages and artificial respiration. Use of splints will be the next course, Mrs. Jesse Cook is the instructor.

Pvt. Paul C. Gordon Killed in Action In Philippines

The third Cumberland man to die in the service of his country in the present world conflict is Pvt. Paul C. Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Gordon, of 962 Glenwood street.

The family received notification yesterday from the War Department that their son had been killed in action in the Philippines. Pvt. Gordon was serving his second enlistment in the army.

Besides his parents he is survived by two brothers, William and Vernon Gordon, this city.

Grass Fires Keep Firemen Busy

Local firemen were kept busy yesterday afternoon fighting grass fires in different sections of the city.

Firemen from Engine Company No. 2, South End, extinguished a blaze on Troy street at 12:23 p. m.

At 2:53 p. m., firemen from Engine Company No. 4, East Side, put out a blaze that burned over about two acres of grass land on Willow Brook road.

The third grass fire was extinguished by firemen from Engine Company No. 3, West End, on Schley street at Mountain View drive.

Cumberland Men Are Among Army Graduates

Among the large class of army air corps graduates to complete their course this week at Sheppard Field, Texas, were three local men and one from Grantsville.

They are Robert C. Ruppert, 410 Central avenue; John J. Rowan, 406 Davidson street, and James C. Miller, RFD 5, all of Cumberland and Mark L. Schaefer, Grantsville.

Corp. Robert H. Goodwin, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Goodwin, Hyndman, Pa., serving with the army at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., has been assigned to Officers Training School.

John F. Leacock, 219 Carrol street, a recent draftee, has been stationed at Pine Camp, N. Y.

Large Crowd Hears Sacred Concert

The sacred concert presented last evening by members of the Allegany County Homemakers Chorus at Park Place Methodist church, was presented to a capacity audience under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Trevaskis.

The program was divided into two parts the first of group hymns and solo numbers included "The Heavens Are Declaring", Beethoven; "Praise the Lord O My Soul", Roland Smart; "The Vesper Bell", Ira B. Wilson; "Night Bells", Charles Vincent; "Blessings", Pearl G. Curran; and "Thanks" Geoffrey O'Hara by the chorus. Mrs. Vernon Cost played Schubert's Serenade and the hymn, "Face to Face" as violin solos. Mrs. Joseph Wheeler sang "O Savior Hear Me" with Mrs. Cost accompanying on the violin and Mrs. R. W. Trevaskis at the piano.

The Rev. Hirl A. Kester gave a short talk on each of the hymns for the praise service which comprised the second part of the program. It included "How Firm a Foundation", "O, Love That Will Not Let Me Be" and "In the Cross of Christ I Glory".

A social hour was held by the Ladies Aid society of the church, under the chairmanship of Mrs. G. C. Ort, following the concert.

Ruling Is Changed For Burial of Wives In National Cemetery

Wives of both officers and enlisted men may be buried in a national cemetery prior to the death of their husbands provided the latter gives assurance that regardless of whether he remarries he will eventually be buried in the adjacent grave site reserved for him.

This information was received yesterday by Thomas F. Conlon, service officer of Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, from Richard C. Manning, rehabilitation chairman of the Maryland Department of the American Legion.

Heretofore, Conlon said, a wife could not be buried in a national cemetery unless her husband preceded her in death.

Manning also stated that if a lot has been assigned to an individual, the burial of his minor children and unmarried adult daughters (including widows and divorcees) may be permitted provided there is room in the lot. No lots or grave sites may be assigned prior to their actual requirement for burial purposes.

Dr. Kenneth B. Jones, superintendent of the Springfield State hospital will speak on "Common Sense Psychiatry" at the meeting of the Allegany-Garrett County Medical Society to be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Nurses Home of Memorial hospital.

Child Is Hurt By Falling Plaster

Plaster falling from the ceiling of a Baltimore street store Thursday afternoon caused a slight laceration of the forehead of Dona Jean Nield, two-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Nield, 113 Grand avenue.

The plaster fell from a five foot section but broke before it struck the child. She was discharged from Allegany hospital after receiving treatment there.

Revival Services Will Close Tonight

John T. Smithson, Jr., evangelist, who is conducting revival services at the Church of Christ, 400 Goethe street, will preach his farewell sermon of the meetings tonight at 7:45 o'clock on the subject "Two Ways to Heaven and Two Ways to Hell."

Demonstration Agent Explains Pattern Cutting

A demonstration on cutting dresses from patterns was given by Miss Margaret Loar, assistant home demonstration agent, at the meeting of the Senior Cumberland 4-H Girls club last evening at the home of Rosemary Squillace, 1400 Frederick street. Dresses for the style revue to be held May 9, were begun.

Food nutrition and daily food requirements were discussed by Miss Loar and the roll call was answered with "the name of a food we should eat and don't."

Mrs. Joseph Squillace gave a report on the leaders meeting held last Saturday at the court house by Miss Dorothy Emerson, College Park. The 4-H pledge was led by Helen Smith.

Johnson Rites Will Be Held Saturday

Funeral services for Carl Johnson, 52, Brierly avenue, Homestead, Pa., will be held Saturday morning with burial in Allegany cemetery, Frostburg. He died early yesterday morning after an illness of nine months.

Young Mother, Told Husband Died In War, Gets Cable He Is Alive

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 26 (AP)—A young West Virginia university co-ed, who had resigned herself to the fact that her husband had been killed in action more than a month ago in far-off Burma, has received a cablegram from him advising he is safe in a Chinese village.

The electrifying news set the world right again for Mary Virginia Robinson Young, who had returned to the university to study medicine when her husband, Russel Hiram Young, 30, formerly of Pennsburg, Pa., went abroad with the U. S. military mission to expedite traffic over the Burma Road.

Reported Dead

The War department's terse message that Young died near Rangoon not only had left Mrs. Young with the task of working her way through medical school, but of supporting a two and one-half year old daughter, Suzanne.

Without taking out time for her sorrow, however, and without telling any but her closest student friends of "Dutch's" death, she set about to do her duty.

By re-arranging her hours of college study, she obtained work as a nurse for four hours daily, five days a week, and twelve hours a day on the other two days, at Monongalia County hospital near Morgantown. This job was to start on Friday.

After receiving the cablegram she thought a while and announced:

"I am going ahead with the program I had planned. I know it will be hard work, but the fact that Dutch is alive will make it much easier. I already have conditioned myself for it mentally, and see no reason why I shouldn't go ahead."

Young went with the military mission as a mechanic. His cable came from Kunming, China.

Mrs. Young lived in Grafton, W. Va., until her marriage. Her daughter has been staying in Fairmont with an aunt since the mother resumed work toward her goal—to be a physician.

How To Be a Gent, And Have Fun, Too

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—Regulations published for military cadets at Louisville State University admittedly contemplate that "many stilted forms of the Victorian age are now outmoded" as regards practices among gentlemen.

Youths still are advised however that it's always right to assist a lady in distress.

"One should not take advantage of this to prolong a chance acquaintance," the code warns sternly but adds in the next breath, with an appeal to the man in a fellow, "unless the lady obviously wishes it."

This Is Unity: War Ends Old Range Feuds

BELLE FOURCHE, S. D. (AP) — The war has brought peace to South Dakota ranges where sheepmen and cattlemen have been traditional rivals for water rights and grass for a generation.

The South Dakota Stock Growers Association (cattlemen) and the Western South Dakota Sheep Growers voted to meet in joint convention this summer. Their directors said their problems on rustling, foreign import competition, sanitation and inspections were so much alike, two conventions were unnecessary.

Miss Lillian Compton Speaks on Education

Assistant Superintendent of Schools Addresses Gephart P-TA

Speaking on the "Evaluation of the Elementary School Program" Miss Lillian Compton, assistant superintendent of schools, reviewed the changing practices in the school curriculum and stressed that if the adults set a high goal for education for the children, the child will develop one itself and besides completing elementary education will go through high school and continue its education after finishing school.

Discussed Program

She also discussed the elementary program in the school and the interpretation placed on what the child should have in school to prosper.

In celebration of the seventeenth birthday of the Gephart Parent-Teacher Association last evening which followed Miss Compton's talk Harold Fletcher introduced George Barnard, Charles Shaw, Walter Mortzfield, Mrs. Clifton Roby, Clarence Valentine, Dr. Karl W. Kolb, LeRoy Snyder, William Landefeld, past presidents, and Harold Fearer, the present president of the association. They with the officers of the association and the teachers at the school were presented floral tokens by Robert Eyler and June Whittaker, who were dressed in red, white and blue costumes.

Have Candlelight Service

Another part of the celebration was a candlelight service with the following children taking part: Evelyn Meselck, Joseph Thomas Butler, Deloris Howe, Sylvia Miller, Everstine Mitchell, Henry Chaney, Paul Landis, James Chenowith, Henry Holmes, Mary Jo Broadback, John Hale, Joanne Bopp, Jeanne Bradfield, Hilda Spence, Josephine Kompanek, Marjorie Schade and Betsy Kilroy.

The musical program included "Gypsy Trail" and "Good Night, Beloved" by Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reith with Mrs. John Dorn at the piano.

Mrs. Raymond Hinkle presided at the business meeting which preceded the program and reported $51.95 had been raised on the card party held last month in Queen City hotel. She appointed Mrs. Hugh Whittaker, Mrs. George Butler, Mrs. J. L. Stump, Mrs. W. T. Burton and C. H. Wagner a committee for the program for the meeting next month.

Mrs. Charles Davenport, principal of the school, introduced Mrs. A. Love, who spoke on organizing a Girl Scout Brownie pack at the school. Mrs. Hubert Radcliffe, the new teacher of the first grade, was also introduced.

A social hour was held and refreshments served.

Mothers Should Realize Children Do the Marrying

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX—Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A day or two ago I received a letter from a young man who has a good position in defense work, and who is having a little trouble with his mother about the girl he wants to marry. Here's what he says:

"Sometime ago I met a young lady," writes Burt. "We went out occasionally, and I wasn't long before we decided that we were in love. My mother liked her too, and so long as we were all getting between

One day, mother's dearest friend came to call on us from another city. She had a son about my age and a girl a year younger than myself. When they moved to this city, to finish school, I took the young lady out to dinner. Mother turned against my fiancee, T., and pretended to be very unhappy whenever I went over to see her.

Mother Destroyed Letters

Mother insisted that we break with my fiancee and thought that loneliness would drive me to M. She offered $25, but it didn't work. T. is employed and her unit moved to another state temporarily. While she was away, I wrote to her often, that is, she wrote to me but I never received the letters, so mother intercepted the letters, and forged them," continues Burt.

When T. returned we started going around again, and we were very happy. Mother threatened to take out her friend's daughter, but I refused. I was then asked not to bring T. to the house any more.

"I love the girl so much that I just can't give her up, and if mother likes to go against my mother's wishes, although I think I'm old enough to know my own mind, I have reasoned with mother but she refuses to see it my way.

"I have a good position and don't think there's much chance of my being drafted as my work is along defense lines. I want to get married and can well take care of a wife. Also, my mother has her own income, so I'm not worrying about that. I just don't know what to do—I dislike leaving home in a shoot 'em up, but I don't want to lose my mother and wife to be friends. Please help me, the letter concludes.

This boy writes a straightforward letter about his love affairs. To me, it seems a case of too much mother. He is self-supporting and ought to be able to pick out his own wife. Just because his mother has a dear friend who has a daughter of marriageable age is no good reason for them to marry each other.

My advice would be for these young folks to listen to the dictates of their own hearts and marry to suit themselves. From what the young man writes me, he is able to maintain a home and his mother doesn't rely on him for support.

Parents who indulge in the dangerous business of match-making are playing with dynamite. Before the automobile age, when any presentable young man was something to say grace over, it might have been different. Even today, there's a certain type of dependent girl who may be guided in the right direction to select her life partner. But with a young man who is self-supported and knows his own mind, it's better to let him do his own courting.

Decision Hers Alone

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been separated for six months. The cause of our separation was a girl, who has since died. However, I met another man with whom I'm now in love and who also loves me. I live at home with my sister.

Will you please advise me whether to divorce my husband and marry the man I love, or shall I go back with my husband? We have no children.

GRACE.

If you belong to a religion which refuses to accept divorce as a severance of marital relations, it's up to you and your conscience.

Rereading your letter many times, which is too long to print, apparently there was no real reason which prompted your separation from your husband. You tell me he was nicer to the other girl than he was to you, and spent more on her than he did on you.

At long last, this question is up to you, your conscience and your religion. As you've not stated your faith, and whether or not you believe in divorce, the decision is yours.

Frightened into Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was frightened into marrying a man I didn't love and I'll never, never love him. I was very young, and when he threatened me, I took him seriously. I'd know better now. He has always been cross with me, and has never treated me as a wife, but just as someone to keep house for him and keep his clothes mended and in order.

Now I've fallen in love with a man who is everything my husband isn't. I didn't mean to fall in love, but somehow it happened. He is so good we have so many things in common.

I haven't told my husband but I suspect, and is making life more miserable than ever going into fits of anger. When he calms down he treats me better than ever, even telling me how beautiful I look in certain gowns with whom I'm in love. I've never asked me to divorce my husband, as it's against the rules to break up a home, but if I were free I know I'd marry me. Shall I tell my UNHAPPY.

I never loved your husband and marriage was brought about by threats, he should not expect much from such a partnership. Better be frank about the whole thing with your husband. Don't have a clandestine affair with this man. Better tell your husband how you feel about things. Then whatever steps you do take, have them open and above-board.

Hangs Clothes on Floor

Dear Miss Fairfax:

You often hear of girls who go berserk on their personal appearance after marriage. Well, what about the men? My husband is a very handsome but, believe me, he is without a doubt the sloppiest person I've ever seen.

He has the best sports clothes we can afford. We've been married almost a year. He's 25 and I'm 22. He got lots of nice things for Christmas, but you should see them now. All I ask is for him to hang them up.

I'm expecting a baby and am going to the hospital in April. It takes lots of my strength to keep up our home and our clothes looking well.

To all mothers, I say, train your children to hang up their clothes. It doesn't take much time and it means a lot to the housekeeper. It's good for the clothes, too.

A FUTURE MOTHER.

I am heartily in accord with this lady that one of the best things a mother can do is to teach her boys to hang up their clothes and take care of them. A friend of mine who has a handsome and successful husband refers to his clothes-closet as "the moth's hotel." Like the woman who writes me, my friend gave up looking after the gentleman's wardrobe after the birth of her fourth child. So he just buys more clothes and the moths move in and have a party.

Begin when the children are little, teach them to put away their toys after playing with them.

Too Young

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a girl of 16 for about four months. I learned to love her very much and understood she loved me. Now I find she has been corresponding with a soldier who is about 22 or 23 years old. She denies this, but I saw a letter addressed to him from her.

We've talked about getting married and even planned our apartment, but now I've lost hope. Do you think I should try to forget this girl?

EUGENE.

Unless a girl is most unusual, it is a pretty tender age at which to expect those qualities which make for responsibilities in marriage. She's probably in love with a uniform and the glamour that goes to the boys of living at Stewart Field, soldiers, soldiers, soldiers. Sensible girls don't marry at 16. Such things stepped up by the feeling of war in the air. Don't expect too much of unanswering engagements. Don't think this girl's love is gone.

Here's a Horror Story With a Happy Ending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maynard Grove, a mechanic at a railroad powerhouse, dropped some change in the locker room. Searching for it, he found a bomb under a locker.

Police found the date 8-31/17 written on the bomb's side. They concluded it had been planted there during World War 1, had failed to go off and had never been discovered.

Priority Frock

Marian Martin

Cotton is your "priority fabric" —Pattern 9015 by Marian Martin is your "priority frock!" See how attractive it looks in white pique (to save dye); see how the one-button closing saves buttons! You can conserve fabric too by making the cap-sleeved version or the sleeveless version, both shown in the smaller figures. You can eliminate even the one button and use gay print contrast for the bodice and optional sash.

Pattern 9015 may be ordered only in misses' sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 2¼ yards 35 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents (plus one cent to cover cost of mailing) for this Marian Martin Pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

There's a gay Spring "lift" for your wardrobe in our Spring Pattern Book that's full of easy-to-make, practical, distinctive styles for the entire family. This book is yours for just ten cents.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

THE DAILY STORY

RENDEZVOUS

Who Would Have Thought That a Man Like David Could Ever Inspire a Girl to Such Sacrifices—or Such Pain?

(Copyright by United Feature Syndicate)

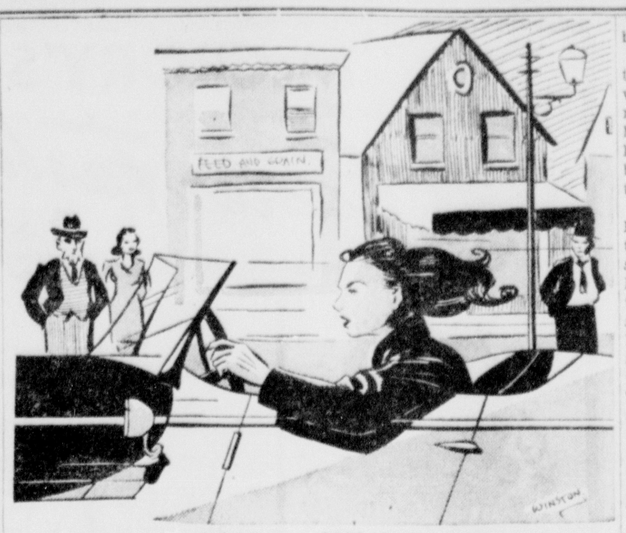
By FAY CARY

I had no police record; had never been convicted or even arrested on any charge whatsoever, prior to my trial for the murder of David Ames. That fact carried much weight with the jury that heard my case, because it was quite evident from all the circumstances that David Ames had been killed by a calloused murderer—or murderers. A rank amateur like myself, the jury assumed would not have planned the thing so carefully. And I think that perhaps they were right. I sincerely hope that they were, because I loved David Ames.

It was in the winter of 1936 when I was teaching the upper four classes in School No. 6, Macklin County, Wisconsin. I had taken a room with an elderly farm couple in their old, ramshackle farmhouse about a mile outside the town of Macklin. And through them I met David. He was a nephew of old Mrs. Campbell, a handsome strongly built boy with a brilliant mind, sharp, clear brown eyes, and a wonderful winning personality. He had ambition, too, more perhaps than was good for him. When he'd graduated from the university he'd gotten a job with a big Wisconsin paper company and in five years had been advanced to the position of sales manager of the entire Wisconsin territory.

That was the night we went for a ride in my car after the Campbells had gone to bed. The moon was bright, a shimmering yellow disk that harmonized in formal austere beauty with the cool, knife-like sylvan quiet of the September night. My car was small and a convertible; and as David drove he put his arm around my shoulder and I willingly drew close to him. I shivered, pretending that the cold drove me to shelter, but I'd had done the same, I know, if the sun had been blistering my skin. He stopped the car after awhile, on a peaceful little country road running off at an angle to the main highway. And we parked there and talked and got to know each other better. I've often thought, than lots of couples who've been married and living together for years. From that moment in David's life and mine we belonged to one another.

I was proud of David's love for me and the idea that I must improve myself in order to be worthy of him became almost an obsession. Four or five nights of each week I had nothing whatever to do, and so I enrolled in several university "extension courses," by which I could qualify eventually to take examinations for a master's degree in history, which was my major.



I drove in a sickish daze.

But working day and night wore me down terribly. I knew that I was losing weight, that I wasn't eating well, that my control over my grades in the school was slipping badly. But preparing for a career as David's wife was my first consideration; I could let nothing stand in the way of that.

My convertible car was cold those winter mornings driving to school, and all too often I drove the four or five freezing miles in a sickish daze resulting from late hours at my desk and incessant cups of coffee to keep my mind clear.

And finally, inevitably, I suppose I was sick. Sudden fever sent chills through me one afternoon as I was winding up classwork, and the ride home through the biting cold left me almost paralyzed. But I didn't want to be sick that night because David was coming.

Mrs. Campbell met me at the door, intuitively knowing that I wasn't well, and she forced me to go to bed immediately. She tried to reach the local doctor but he was out, so she prescribed a stiff potion of whisky and hot lemonade, heaped me over with blankets, and left me, saying that she'd be back in a little while.

I remember having a wild dream shortly after I went to bed; a dream in which David was a kind of Mr. Hyde, a beast who smiled cruelly and made me scream with pain beneath the lashing of his tongue and the torture of his hands. I remember, too—so very vividly—falling on the floor. But I don't remember getting up. I only know that there must have been some basis for the recollection because I had a bruise on the side of my head for weeks thereafter.

David was found next morning in a big chair in the living room, a sharp-pointed pencil driven straight through his neck. The pencil was mine—at least it was the kind I always used. On the small table in the living room(right beside his chair) was a note apparently written with the death-weapon pencil. It read: "I am sorry, darling, that it must end this way. I shall never see you again. Please try to forgive me." It was signed, "David," and was written in David's hand, but it was addressed to no one.

Mrs. Campbell said at the trial that David had been deeply upset when he arrived at the house that night, and had been frantic when he learned that I was ill. When she had taken him into my room I had been in a deep sleep, and for a week thereafter I was delirious.

She allowed me to stay at her house for several weeks after the trial and until I had regained my strength. Then she told me, as kindly as she could, that I would have to leave. I was surprised and shocked at her manner, fearful that I had offended her in some way. She offered no explanation until I was walking out the front door. Then she said: "I didn't mention it at the trial, my dear, but I looked into your room once during the night that David was killed. You were not in your bed. I found you in the bathroom, drying your hands. There was blood on the towel and when I mentioned it, you pointed to the bathroom glass lying broken on the floor. Then you laughed, quite horribly, and went past me and back to your room. Your face was terribly flushed and you were quite delirious—but you can understand, my dear, why I don't want you here any longer."

Yes, I understood. I can understand everything except what happened that night.

Robert Goes to Jail-- On a 6-Day Week Basis

BECKLEY, W. Va. (AP)—Every Friday morning Robert Williams leaves the Raleigh county jail to attend to his business, and every Saturday he returns to be locked up in a cell until the next Friday.

Williams pleaded guilty to an unlawful wounding charge, and Judge Clay S. Crouse sentenced him to a year in jail. But Williams has a number of juke-boxes in establishments around over the coal fields, and he said he was unable to find anyone he could trust to do his collecting.

Crouse allowed Williams to post $1,000 bond so he could do his collecting on Fridays and his jail serving on the other days in the week.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

JIMMY WAS waiting in the alley when Anette slipped through the heavy stage door a few minutes later.

"Oh, hello," she managed to say pleasantly through her surprise, "Is Lois with you?"

"No." Together they moved up the narrow cement walk toward the street. "Lois left New York today." Where has she gone to look for Larry now, the young actress wondered, just as Lyndon offered briefly, "She is going to tour Canada."

"It sounds enchanting," said Anette. And she was honest. There was an enchantment in knowing Lois had gone. Now the dark-haired girl knew she could leave the Sussex and join Larry in the roomy, but unpretentious apartment on Riverside Drive. They could be together instead of depending on the poor substitute of long telephone calls. That had been almost as unsatisfactory as having him in Chicago.

When they reached the street, Lyndon glanced toward the line of waiting taxis. "I don't see your watchdog."

"Oh, he picks me up occasionally, but he isn't here every night any more. I was having some trouble with Lance Ericsson at that time." She tried not to appear too impatient as she stopped, hoping the blonde young man would take the hint, say goodnight and leave her. She even smiled, which was a mistake. The gesture was unconsciously so full of friendliness that her caller had no intention of leaving.

"Ericsson does appear to be an arrogant person. But of course all—" He hesitated.

"I know." She smiled for the second time to relieve his discomfiture. "All actors are conceited." They both laughed.

She began walking again and moved slowly beneath the glowing marquee. To her regret, Lyndon swung into step. "I'm glad to know you're not having trouble with Ericsson now."

"Oh, but I am. It's impossible not to have trouble with Ericsson." Puzzledly she shook her bare head. "He's a strange character. He fights with me. He insults me. He hates me, and yet, the other night he said if he had me for a leading lady instead of Jane Hubert, we might work into as much of a drawing team as Larry and August. Naturally that is not possible," she said loyally. "Anyway, he probably was making fun of me." In a half-amused tone she said, "He kicked me on the shin tonight."

"The dirty rat!" James Lyndon cut in with a vengeful fury that amazed her. She stopped again and really looked at him. His lean, tanned well-shaped jaws were gritted tightly. "Why doesn't your husband attend to him?"

She asked tartly, "Which would you suggest? Horse-whipping or hanging?" More seriously, she continued, "Larry would if he knew, but I don't intend for him to know. If I'm going to play this theatrical game I have to take trouble along with success." Her red lips curled mischievously and the topaz eyes grew even more brilliant than usual. "Anyway, it doesn't make any difference. I kicked him back and it is twice as bad for him, because those cream serge soldier trousers show every smudge. I help give work to the cleaners."

"I still don't like it!" said Lyndon determinedly.

Anette wanted to tell him it was none of his business, whether he liked it or did not like it, that all he had to do was go away and let her get home so she could pack a few things and rush to Larry. With that thought, she started forward once more, taking more rapid steps.

"Let me drive you home."

"No, thank you. I like to walk a few blocks for the exercise. Then I'll grab a taxi. Purely to make conversation she asked, "Were you out front tonight?"

"Yes," he said in a strange tone. "I was there." Suddenly he reached for her hand and pulled her to the inside of the sidewalk, near the building, where they were sheltered somewhat from the milling crowd. "I've been there every night."

There, under hot electric lights that glittered brighter than midday; there, amid hundreds of people, some of whom even brushed against them, the girl had a feeling of being in utter blackness in a deserted spot. She felt her knees weaken. She was incredibly frightened. Childhood memories of times she had got to swinging too high in her swing beneath the giant oak tree swept over her. As if it were yesterday, she remembered that combined feeling of buoyancy and fright, that mixed-up sensation of flying and falling all at the same time.

Powerless to resist, she lifted her eyes to James Lyndon's face. His own eyes were upon her with a steady blue gaze that made the blood hammer at her cheeks and temples.

"Don't say any more," she begged and turned her head.

Why, she worried, did the emotions of the gibbering Lois, who flaunted her affection for Larry, who lost no opportunity to kiss him and compliment him loudly, flagrantly and publicly, seem suddenly so much less disastrous than the emotions of her quietly yearning brother who dared do nothing more than hold her fingers? However, with such a hold! Scandalized, Anette realized that her fingers were gripping his with equal pressure. But for a different reason; without that support, she felt she would have fallen in her tracks from sheer idiotic weakness.

Imperatively she dragged them from his and felt a quick stabbing pain where the man's hold crushed her rings into the flesh. She backed away from him until her rigid shoulders were against the dirty building.

"Don't be afraid, Anette." Such an unhappy expression touched his face that the girl could feel nothing but sympathy.

"It's all right," she whispered. In swift repetition she assured him, "It's all right." With a little sidewise movement along the drab brick wall, she drew away from him and fled.

A fine situation! After all their red-herring subterfuge to rid themselves of the bothersomely romantic Lois—now this! What would Larry have to say about it? As quickly, she knew he would say nothing, because she did not intend to tell him.

From the Sussex she telephoned him immediately, hoping he would offer to come pick her up.

"Hurry and pack," came his disappointing answer, "and get on over. Come to August's apartment—Miss Ada Browning," he designated. "We're having a story conference. I think we're about to get something. And say, darling," he added, "pick up a pint of coffee cream. Katie's gone to bed and we're too busy."

"What about me?" she demanded of herself, as she began packing with feverish speed. "I'm busy, too!" And then a sort of joyous calm seeped through her, a sweet feeling of domesticity, not too sternly real, more make-believe. "I wish I had an organdy apron," she thought, and began to hum a popular song.

Or nothing quite that fancy, she decided, when she reached "Ada Browning's" apartment and caught a glimpse of August. Larry snatched her into his arms the instant he answered the door, then ushered her on tiptoe to a big chair. He pulled her into his lap, and ignored her while he sat listening and watching, with a nonchalance difficult to understand, a violent argument between the red-haired actress and an obstinate-chinned, bespectacled young man.

After having tossed the dark-haired girl an arm-waving greeting, August Drake went right on talking—yelling, rather. But Anette did not listen. She was too busy taking in the actress' unusual and strange appearance. August wore a faded green gingham robe, one that had seen arduous duty as a makeup garment in her dressing room. It was held on with a tarnished gold kid belt. On her feet were straw-mat coolie sandals. The ruby-toned polish on her toenails was cracked and worn; that on her fingernails was little better.

That survey accomplished, Anette began to listen to the conversation. "You call yourself a playwright?" August was saying to the almost-shaking man. Her sparse, unpainted eyelashes squinted threateningly. "Why, those lines are not fit to be fed to the pigs, and you try to talk me into saying them with a straight face."

"Madam," the young man insulted dramatically, "I was brought up to respect gray hair, which I'm sure yours is beneath that expert henna job, but I'd rather be shot than take such abuse." He picked up the script and clamped it under his arm. "You can't talk like that about my play."

As if garbed in pearls and velvet August Drake made a sweeping move toward the door. She pointed to it. "Get out! You should rot in a pickle vat for writing it that way." As the absurdly angry, puffed-up young man passed her, she snatched the script from under his arm. "You won't need anything but the last act," she said. "The rest isn't so bad."

Not trusting his voice, the playwright did not answer. He just slammed the door on his way out. August hugged the remainder of the script against her chest. "What a play! What a beautiful, wonderful, deliriously marvelous play!" she murmured rapturously. Her dreamy eyes widened to look fixedly at Anette. "Did you bring the cream?" As speechless as the puzzled writer, Anette simply held up the paper sack.

"Then let's eat," cried the actress.

Laurence Peyton tightened his arms about his wife and kissed her with exuberance. "What a lovely world!" he sighed. "Lois Lyndon has gone. My gorgeous darling with me. We're getting a great play even if August does have to infuriate the chap to make him do it right." He sighed again, "Not a thing to worry about."

"Except James Lyndon," thought Anette. She shut her eyes tightly.

William Wilson Draws Prison Term for Garrett Holdup

Harvey Sentenced To Two Years in Maryland Cut

Both Boys Plead Guilty To Robbing Cumberland Man February 9

OAKLAND, March 26—William W. Wilson, 19, and Harold W. Harvey, 14, entered pleas of guilty to charges of armed robbery, outgrowth of a holdup when the two men forced James B. Collins, Cumberland, from his car on the Deer Park road at the point of a sawed-off shotgun, and were sentenced to five years in the house of correction respectively.

Wilson and Harvey entered pleas of guilty to the charge of holding up James B. Collins, Cumberland, on the Deer Park-Kitzmiller highway on Monday evening, February 9, with a sawed-off shotgun, robbing him of a small amount of cash, forcing him to surrender his automobile, in which they drove away.

Both Harvey and Wilson were captured a few days later where Harvey lived with his father at Kitzmiller. The automobile was also recovered.

Wilson is an escaped prisoner from a West Virginia road gang, according to Neil C. Fraley, state's attorney and was under sentence in the West Virginia penitentiary. The court sentenced Wilson to five years in the Maryland penitentiary and Harvey to two years in the house of correction.

In the case of C. C. Show, charged with issuing worthless checks, who was tried before the court and a verdict of guilty pronounced, a sentence of two years in the house of correction was meted out but sentence was suspended upon condition he produce the sum of $400 before the next term of court and appear again at that time for further restitution.

Fraley said that Show had written checks to the amount of $1,000 to $1,200 payable to farmers of the county for cattle sold at auction by Show at the stock yards.

Sentenced for Jail Break

William Wilson also pleaded guilty to the offense of breaking jail and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary for this offense, the sentence to run concurrently with his sentence for armed robbery.

Wilson escaped from the hospital room of the jail on Monday, February 23, along with Leroy Wilt, of Bear Hill, apprehended on a larceny charge. Wilson was captured the same day but Wilt still remains at large.

Chauncey Lowdermilk and Albert McCombie pleaded guilty to the charge of aiding and assisting in the prison break of Wilson and Wilt, but have not yet been sentenced. Both admit that as "trusties" at the jail they purchased hack-saw blades which they turned over to Wilson and Wilt, with which the latter two sawed their way to freedom.

Swauger Found Guilty

Albert Swauger, charged with assault with intent to kill, was tried by a jury and found guilty. Sentence not yet passed. Swauger was charged with shooting his wife in the leg with a charge from a shotgun at their home near Jennings last fall. The woman was in the hospital for several weeks.

Earl Wilt and Mark Wilt pleaded guilty to larceny and receiving stolen goods on two separate indictments. Sentence has not yet been passed.

Lewis Kiser pleaded guilty to the charge of non-support of his child and was ordered to pay $12 per month for such support.

Jasper Sisler, tried before a jury on the charge of unlawfully cutting timber near Sang Run, was found not guilty.

On a criminal appeal case from Friendsville, Charles A. Wilt, teacher in the Friendsville elementary school, was found not guilty of a charge of assault, brought by Walter Nicklow, a student in the high school there.

On the bench this week were Associate Judges William A. Huster and Joseph D. Mish.

Speaks on Garden Plans

Emphasizing that every farmer and others with proper knowledge and facilities should grow a garden this year in the Victory Garden campaign, James A. Towler, county chairman, pointed out today that the amateur gardener without proper facilities should hold his misguided patriotism in check as it would hurt rather than help the war effort.

But he urged all those who have some experience in gardening to continue that work and to enlarge their garden space this year in the campaign to grow more food.

Towler was appointed county chairman last week at a meeting of representatives of many county organizations. He is a former county agent.

An enrollment of members will be started soon but, he said, people should not wait for that. They should select their garden plot, get the seed and fertilizer as soon as possible as both might be scarce this spring.

"In Garrett County," he continued, "we hope to avoid mistakes

Suggests Observance Of Army Day in W. Va.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 26 (AP)—The observance of army day, April 6, in West Virginia with as many parades as possible was urged today by state Defense Co-ordinator Carl G. Bachman in letters to county defense chairmen.

He requested the civilian defense officials to offer their services to municipal authorities and suggested that uniformed units, trucks with signs promoting the salvage, victory garden and defense programs be included.

made in 1917. At that time five million people planted victory gardens. They plowed up lawns, public parks, flower beds and city lots. Often as not the produce was negligible. We can't afford to duplicate these costly errors. The government would prefer to see the amateur without proper facilities hold his misguided patriotism in check. It will hurt rather than help to buy $20 worth of tools, seeds and fertilizer and harvest forty cents worth of vegetables. He will be depleting the already scanty supply of seed and wasting valuable fertilizer. So only qualified people should plant gardens.

"Every farmer, however, in the county and all others who have suitable soil and the proper knowledge and facilites should grow a garden, not too large but large enough to grow what you need for your own use."

Mayor L. M. Fraley, of Oakland, recently promised to make garden space available to any who desired to have a garden and did not have the ground, if they would sign up at city hall.

Sewing Resumed

A county - wide sewing project, sponsored by the county commissioners and under the women's division of the WPA, which was discontinued several months ago, was resumed Wednesday with thirteen assigned to work.

These women are being furnished transportation by the commissioners and they are coming from Kitzmiller, Shallmar, Deer Park, Vindex and Hutton.

Arrangements for the resumption of work were made by Mrs. Catherine Dwyer, state superintendent, who is in the county this week.

Miss Gertrude Browning has been named local supervisor with Mrs. J. G. Robinson as timekeeper. The women will be engaged in sewing various kinds of garments for distribution on the surplus commodities program and will work 120 hours each month. The sewing room is located in the court house.

sons and, believe it or not 2,000 men can be fed in about forty minutes.

"The food is absolutely first quality before the cooks have a chance to do their stuff. Naturally in a place such as this where a different group is being fed every four or five days all that matters is to just feed the men.

"Pastries have been excellent—surprisingly so. The pies and cakes we have had are quite good, but the potatoes—well when they are fried, I still have not been hungry enough to eat them more than twice.

"When I was on K.P. Sunday the cooks began to fry the eggs at 6 o'clock and by 7 o'clock they were sorry tasting things. Meats, soups, salads and the like are almost always good.

"We had our first taste of army 'goldfish' last Friday evening. Salmon souffle was the technical name for our dish but some of the men gave it other names—more descriptive ones.

"We were told we could go to bed Friday morning at 1 o'clock; were up at 5:45 and were off duty at 5 p. m. Saturday . . . 5:45 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sunday I was K.P. and we were awakened at 4:20 a. m. and dressed in fatigue clothes. At 5 a. m. we reported to the mess hall and were assigned to our tasks.

"We didn't get a minute's rest until 2:30 p. m., and by that hour our feet were pretty well blistered from the new field shoes.

"Since supper was early we had a break and were through by 7:30 p. m. That and the fact that we had a rest of about an hour and forty-five minutes in the afternoon makes it a so-called easy day. We were all exhausted.

"By the way, the more I see of newspapers in this section the more proud I am of our Cumberland papers. They just do not offer news coverage as our paper does. True I am prejudiced, but I can imagine just what Jimmie would say to us if we were to do as some of the reporters on the papers here do.

"About 100 of our group have been sent to training camps and since 150 are to leave tomorrow I will probably be in the group. The destination, of course, is secret.

"Any of the boys who are to be sent to an induction center should surely take towels and toilet articles with them. We left Keyser Thursday. On Monday towels, razor, shaving and tooth brushes were issued. I forgot to bring towels but I did have several clean undershirts and a kit containing toilet articles.

"I'll write when I reach a permanent camp. The pipe and the tobacco (a gift from the boys on the NEWS) have been welcome. It's a nice way to recall things at the office."

Three Woods Fires Destroy 13 Acres Of Woodlands

Three fires burned over thirteen acres of brush and woods yesterday with a four acre forest fire on Dan's mountain near McCoole being the worst of the three.

Urner G. Wigfield, district fire warden, said the fire on Dan's mountain destroyed valuable hardwood trees. Wigfield also reported that the fire towers at Dan's and Warrior mountains have been opened and watchmen are on duty during daylight hours.

The other two fires reported were along Evitts creek near the Williams road and eight acres were burned over in one blaze and an acre in the other. Damage was slight as the ground was only covered with scrub growth, Wigfield said.

Building Records Behind 1941 Mark

Sixteen building permits calling for an estimated $25,030 worth of construction have been issued this month by the city engineer. Included are four residences for $14,200.

For the first three months of the year 32 permits for $49,825 in construction have been granted as compared to a like number of permits and $62,217 for the same period last year. In 1941, 10 residence permits were issued in the first three months as compared to six for 1942.

hand. Those who don't, plan to order more from Baltimore and that's likely to create a problem there.

Baltimore retailers were calling wholesalers yesterday to replenish dwindling supplies and that may run them short of blades although it isn't considered likely by local merchants.

Blade Production Limited

The order, announced by WPB, directed that during the next ninety days manufacturers may produce seventy per cent of their average 1940 output of safety razors. Production of straight razors and razor blades is limited to the monthly average of 1940.

Electric razors were not included under the restrictions, but WPB officials cautioned that "they will be taken care of in another order to be issued soon."

That's the reason for the rush and the possible return of beards and mustaches.

There's been many a threat to "let it grow" in the past few days so girls, you have more than one problem. You'll probably have trouble controlling your figures without girdles and they say that mustaches tickle.

Jimmy Burke Dies

ST. LOUIS, March 26 (AP)—Jimmy Burke, who ended a lengthy career in baseball when he retired as coach of the New York Yankees in 1933, died today of pneumonia at St. John's hospital.

Burke was never without a baseball job from the time he began playing as third-baseman with Peoria in 1896 until ill health forced his retirement. He was 67 years old.

Manager of the St. Louis Cardinals for one year and the Browns for three years, Burke played with the Chicago White Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates and was a coach with the Detroit Tigers, Boston Red Sox, Chicago Cubs and Yankees.

Volunteers Needed For Nurse's Corps

Applications Can Be Made at Red Cross Headquarters Here

Mrs. Howard T. Robinson, chairman of the Red Cross Volunteer Nurse's Aide Corps, issued a call last night for women between the ages of 18 and 50 to take the course of training. Fifteen more women are needed to complete the organization of classes which will be taught in local hospitals.

Many women who have completed the standard first aid courses being sponsored by the Red Cross and who wish to continue their training in civilian defense work would be ideal applicants for the course, Mrs. Robinson said.

Members of the Nurse's Aide assist nurses on regular duty with such tasks as making beds, giving baths, assisting with non-sterile dressings, and helping apply casts and slings to patients.

Due to a shortage of registered nurses the work of the volunteer nurses will do much to alleviate this condition, Mrs. Robinson added. Distinctive blue and white uniforms and insignias are worn by members of the corps.

Ten Deeds Filed At Court House

Three conditional sales contracts, two chattel mortgages and ten deeds were filed at the recorder's office at the court house yesterday. Deeds filed were:

May Raley to Simeon W. and Hattie M. Whiteman, property known as "Beachwood" near Lonaconing. Charles T. and Bertha B. Wolford to Daniel D. McElfish, property in Election District No. 5. Charles G. and Catherine A. Watson, to The Cumberland Real Estate Corporation, property on National highway between Cumberland and Frostburg.

Lula L. Long to Ory J. and May E. Curry, property in Bowling Green Gardens, McMullen highway. Charles O. and Anise L. Smith to Louise McClure, property in Hook's Fourth addition to Cumberland. Charles O. and Anise L. Smith to Vivian Powell, property on Bedford street.

Roland S. Ravenscroft to Ervin K. Armentrout, property near Danville on the McMullen highway. Wesley A. and Mary C. McGraw to Pearl Cutright, property on Cresap road. The Allegany County Board of Education to the Grahamtown Assembly, property at Grahamtown. Howard Ross to Janet Ayers, property in Barton.

$10,000 Damages Asked in Death Of Frank G. Luman

A suit for $10,000 damages was filed in circuit court yesterday by Mrs. Laura Belle Luman, widow of Frank G. Luman, who died on December 16, 1941, as a result of injuries said to have been caused by an Astor Cab which struck Mr. Luman.

Luman, a retired court house clerk, was struck at the intersection of Cumberland and Lee streets and the bill of particulars states the Astor Cab driver was negligent and careless in operation of the vehicle. Luman had almost reached the sidewalk when hit, the bill stated. Edward J. Ryan, attorney, represents Mrs. Luman.

been sent to Stalin by the United States.

The United States has 5,000 technicians and mechanics at a new base at a port on the Red Sea, Prof. Stough declared and said they were assembling planes and other war machinery as fast as they arrive from America. Russian pilots then fly the planes to Russia for use against the Germans.

A startling statement by Prof. Stough was the assertion that Russia is almost as strong in the air now as Germany and said that by this fall the output of American airplanes would have a telling effect in World war No. 2.

Prof. Stough asserted he did not see any chance of an immediate collapse of Germany but predicted that when the German people realize that Hitler cannot win the war that the country will collapse quickly.

Touching on the Japanese situation, the speaker asserted, Japan might try to go through the Indian Ocean and form a junction with Germany in the Persian gulf in an attempt to cut off the Allies from the Far East.

He said it is hard to say what Japan will do but he expressed the belief that the Japanese will try to take Australia and India but doubted that they could take either country.

Praises MacArthur

Praising General MacArthur, who recently was sent to Australia to take charge of all armies there, Prof. Stough declared that he was a man who would fight and said he would use different tactics than those used by the British in Malaya.

The speaker told the Kiwanians that thousands of American soldiers, and much war equipment including planes are being sent to all parts of the world. American troops are in Australia, Trinidad, Africa, Ireland, Alaska, Iceland and in many other places, he added.

The Kiwanians were told that the greatest danger of losing the war lies right here in America, he termed it the defeatist attitude of so many persons and the spread of confusion.

In an open forum, the speaker answered many questions put to him by various members of the club. He said he did not think Hitler would try to invade England this summer, but said it would be the other way around. He declared it was essential for the Allies to open another front against the Germans. This he said would make it necessary for Hitler to divert troops and equipment from Russia.

Prof. Stough was introduced by Albert Doub, Jr.

PRACTICAL QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON Modernizing YOUR KITCHEN

Q. I have seen pictures of perfectly beautiful kitchens in many leading magazines. Are these "stage set" or are they really possible in the average home?

A. The trend is toward such kitchens in ALL homes. Great advances have been made in kitchen equipment manufacture which are revolutionizing all previous ideas of kitchen design.

Q. Many of my friends have spent real money in "modernizing" their kitchens without getting results as shown in the pictures I have seen. Why is this?

A. Study the pictures and you will see that all the elements of the kitchen fit—in design, in color, in operating relation. There are no working gaps or lost space—no piecemeal arrangement of parts. The kitchen is a complete unit—the result of scientific planning of the whole room.

Q. Then must everything in a modern kitchen be new or especially built?

A. Not at all. You can plan your kitchen around any elements you choose. The most practical plan is to organize and "tie-up" your kitchen with standard wall cupboards, cabinets, table tops and accessories.

Q. But will standard units fit exactly?

A. Yes—if you choose from the Coppes line of equipment. This is the most complete line in America—offering you the greatest variety of styles and sizes—the greatest range of colors—the greatest choice of materials for your work table tops (wood, porcelain, modern metals or compositions—with or without sinks) and the greatest complement of accessories.

Q. Is Coppes equipment durable?

A. It will outlast the homes in which it is used. Hardwood construction throughout, with finest three coat, hand polished enamel finish. It is made by pioneers in scientific kitchen design—the oldest manufacturer of kitchen cabinets in America.

Q. Is it expensive?

A. Not necessarily. The "standard unit" idea enables you to get a modern kitchen to fit any budget.

Stock Traders Stay on Sidelines And Irregular Prices Are Result

Lack of Bidding Operates against Market in Dull Day

By BERNARD S. O'HARA

NEW YORK, March 26 (AP)—Lack of bids, rather than selling pressure, operated against today's stock market.

Potential buyers found nothing particularly stimulating in the news of war or business and most apparently decided to trim commitments a trifle or stand aside. Tax doubts persisted as a handicap, as did apprehension over price controls, priorities and chances of drastic restrictions being imposed on corporate profits.

Losses Are Small

Moderate irregularity ruled at the start but renewed weakness of a handful of blue chips soon turned prices generally lower. Final losses mostly were in small fractions although a few casualties of 4 to 12 points were noted.

Transfers amounted to 301,360 shares compared with 316,345 the day before.

Norfolk & Western dropped 4½ to 143½ and on the year was down about 49 points. West Penn Electric "A", on a few transactions in odd lots, fell 12 points to 46 and for 1942 was off 45 points. These two were at new year's lows or longer, along with American Telephone, Chesapeake & Ohio, Parke Davis, Woolworth and Westinghouse. Virtually all aircrafts were unchanged, while rails, steels, coppers and utilities were exceptionally narrow.

Union Pacific Up

Union Pacific was up ⅛ on a good two months' earnings statement. Parke Davis reacted on the reduction of the dividend from forty cents customarily paid quarterly to thirty cents. O.P.A. permission for a boost in gasoline and fuel oil prices in the east helped some oils.

In a spotty curb small plus signs were posted for Crole Petroleum, Gulf Oil, Pennroad and Aluminum Ltd. In arrears were American Cyanamid, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero and American Gas. Volume here was around 61,000 shares versus 111,000 Wednesday.

Cross-currents of profit selling and continued speculative investment buying turned the bond market irregular.

The day's total was $11,433,000, face value, against $13,041,800 Wednesday.

Chicago Grain Prices

CHICAGO, March 26 (AP)—Wheat, rye and soybeans sold at or near 1942 low prices early in today's market session, having declined almost a cent from Wednesday's close, but then rallied briskly and finished with corresponding net gains.

Buying that about faced the market came from dealers who previously had sold short. Brokers attributed the rally partly to reports of wind and bug damage to wheat in some localities in the southwest.

Sullivan's Travels Features Slapstick

When an actor undertakes to star in a Preston Sturges picture he has to be prepared to take plenty of hard knocks for the sake of comedy.

The latest to find that out is Joel McCrea, co-star with Veronica Lake, in "Sullivan's Travels," the new Paramount comedy written and directed by Preston Sturges, which opens today at the Strand theater. He was bounced, buffeted and cuffed around, all to satisfy the slapstick demands of Sturges' script.

It is the knd of slapstick which has made audiences in the past roar with laughter.

Since Sturges a few film seasons ago added directing to his brilliant talent as a writer, his slapped-around stars have been Brian Donlevy and Akim Tamiroff in "The Great McGinty," Dick Powell in "Christmas in July" and Henry Fonda in "The Lady Eve." Fonda in that one picture took seven comedy falls, you'll remember.

In Sullivan's Travels," Joel experiences as many hardships as any previous Sturges star. His role is that of a Hollywood director of comedies who yearns to make raw dramas, and goes out to deliberately find out about the tougher phases of life.

In the course of his adventures, he falls into a rain barrel full of water. On top of that he blunders into a chicken house, goes tumbling out and smacks into a pig pen, to be over-run by the porcine inhabitants.

"Every bump is fond memory, as far as I'm concerned," says McCrea.

Cabot Uses Hickok's Guns in Character Role

Those notched six-shooters Bruce Cabot is wearing as Wild Bill Hickok in Warner Bros.' "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" which opens tomorrow at the Liberty theater, are the real thing.

They originally belonged to the famous marshal and were loaned to Bruce for use in the picture by William S. Hart, whose hobby is collecting authentic firearms of famous characters of the early-day West. His collection numbers several hundred pieces.

"At The Stroke of Twelve," Warner Bros. short subject coming to the Liberty theater today has been the recipient of unprecedented praise from church groups, civic organizations, American Legion auxiliaries, Parent-Teacher's groups and women's clubs. Never before has any short subject received such unanimous acclaim from such a widely diversified cross-section of the theater public.

Blonde Girl Band Comes to Maryland

Appearing on the stage of the Maryland theater for two days starting today as the featured attraction of the all-girl musical revue, "Platinum Blondes", will be the most unusual musical aggregation ever presented in the theater. It is the country's hottest all-girl orchestra, the Belles of Rhythm, 15 girls and each a blonde.

The orchestra is unusual in that it is typed after the name bands of the air by the selection of the finest feminine musicians available for each instrument. Every one of these girls has at one time or another played with such male bands and each one is noted in musical circles for ability equaling the best male musicians.

The all-girl orchestra is but one of many features promised the theater lover in the big revue. The leading stars among the cast of thirty-six blondes include Edith Rogers Dahl, who saved her husband's life from a firing squad in Spain; Dawn sisters, comediennes; the Sidney and Mason; Winnie May and Company; Ruby Ring; the daring original blonde petty girl and many others.

Actress Gets Nose Trouble; Location Changed

Movie companies go on location for various reasons, but seldom because of the leading lady's nose.

One day Columbia sent John Howard, Lucile Fairbanks, Ruth Ford and other players in "The Man Who Returned To Life," which is now at the Embassy theater, to a ranch some twenty miles west of Hollywood for farmland scenes. The company had been working only an hour when Miss Ford took ill.

"You'll have to get either a new actress or a new location," the nurse on the set told Lew Landers, director.

"There's a lot of sassafras sage on this hillside," the nurse went on, pointing to some, "and Miss Ford seems highly allergic to the stuff. She can't stop sniffling."

Landers decided he needed his actress more than the location. The company moved over the hill and Miss Ford stopped sniffling.

Gene Autry Film Opens at Garden

An unusually fine cast is a distinction of the latest Gene Autry film for Republic, "Back In The Saddle," which opens a run of two days at the Garden theater beginning today. Besides Gene's famous sidekick, Smiley Burnette, lovely Jacqueline Wells, songstress Mary Lee, Edward Norris, Arthur Loft, and Addison Richards round out the cast.

Dealing with the exploits of a debonair detective who mixes romance and crime problems in exciting fashion RKO Radio's "The Gay Falcon" features George Sanders and Wendy Barrie in leading roles. The character of the Falcon is based up on the protagonist of a noted Michael Arlen story. The picture is now at the Garden.

The pursuit of a clever gang of jewel thieves provides the thrills for this breathless story. Allen Jenkins, Anne Hunter, Gladys Cooper, Arthur Shields, Edward S. Brophy and other well-known players are in the cast.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

ANETTE COULD not help looking for James Lyndon when she came out of the theater the following night, but he was not there. Time grew into weeks—two, three, a month, and still he made no attempt to see her. Gradually she relaxed, except when she was onstage. Then she knew he was watching her. She could feel his eyes on her just as they had been that night he had made his awkward attempt at a declaration.

Despite that nervousness, she was extremely happy. The life she was leading with Larry and August, the sort of perpetual picnic, pleased her. The two usually had rehearsed for an hour or so before she got up, which left them free to relax and lunch while she had breakfast.

A delightful and unusual camaraderie formed their hours together. August was a different person, a person without vanity and with no time for any emotions except the fake ones of the play.

She said one noon when she looked exceptionally bad, "I'm hereby proving that I consider you my closest friend, Anette. I would not let anyone except Katie and you and Larry see me like this—and of course dear Joe, the playwright. And I just do it to scare him."

The girl felt herself wanting to cry over the strange tribute, yet knew August would be rabidly sarcastic if she did, so she replied, adhering to the light trend, "For that matter you scare me, August."

Never had the girl had so much time with Larry. Every afternoon, except matinee days of "The Violent Flame," August left them alone, purposely, Anette knew and was doubly baffled over the older actress who was so contradictory, so full of strange impulses that she knew she would never really know her.

While Anette went to the theater, August and Larry worked again so that he was free when she returned. Late at night, they walked in the cool parkway, beside the traffic-filled drive, bareheaded, unnoticed in their plain, inexpensive summer clothes.

Just another young couple. Often they strolled over to upper Broadway for fresh peaches, huge blue plums, Bartlett pears and white grapes. Or, perhaps they went to The Griddle where a pseudo-mammy flapped wheat cakes. There they ate and talked and giggled, while they held hands unashamedly.

So the summer went in a series of hot, sticky days, uncomfortable actually, but heavenly to Anette. They seemed more heavenly, when viewed in retrospect. For when the first nippy mornings and evenings arrived, bringing people back to town, the three moved back to the Sussex, and August and Larry prepared for actual stage rehearsals with the entire cast.

It turned cold with that frosty cold of fall and the beautiful summer dream was over. There began another of those sieges during which Anette scarcely saw her husband. And when she did, it so often was in the presence of others—someone wanting a job, someone wanting money, or still more demanding, interviews with stage directors, set designers, costumers, press agents, the befuddled, but still stubborn-chinned playwright, who constantly remained at August's beck and call, fighting with a paternal fury every change she suggested. Commanded was the more befitting word.

Lois Lyndon returned to the city in early October about a week before the play was to open. In accordance with past procedure, she visited Anette in her dressing room cubicle.

Without preliminary greetings she asked, "How is the play?"

"The usual thing," Anette replied obtusely. "I'm on my second taffeta dress and my 202nd bruise."

"You know I don't mean your play. I mean Larry's."

"And August Drake's?" queried Anette with cutting emphasis. The young actress gazed at her caller, at the summer deposit of golden tan and the few childish freckles. If anything, they made her more attractive, accented as they were by her smart new fall dress of black crepe and silver-fox scarves. "Their play is great," Anette finally told the blonde girl. "And it is their play, incidentally. They bought it outright. It is that good." Anette drew a little upward line with a brown pencil at the outer edge of each eye. "August chanced upon this dope of a playwriter—or, rather the old man who played her father in "Orchids," did. And he turned out to be a genius."

"That's grand!" Lois said with sincerity. "When do they open."

"Sunday. The 17th."

"Are you going?" asked Lois.

Exasperatedly the young actress replied, "Don't be silly. How can I?" In a catty voice she added, "I'll let you represent me. That seems to be what you'd like to do."

The debutante ignored that sarcasm. "Have you seen my brother lately?"

"No." Anette's voice was solemn, uninviting.

"He's seen you." Lois was intent on a set of jangling bracelets. "Every night he's out front and I have a hunch you know it, in spite of your innocent airs. How we Lyndons do go for the Peytons." She stood up and smoothed her superbly fitted black dress over her hips. "I'm giving Larry—and August—a party opening night. I know you won't mind."

If she had said parties, she would have been more truthful. The one celebrating the opening of "Don't Weep, My Love" was large and lavish, an affair similar to a coming out party, with two orchestras, hundreds of guests, priceless floral decorations and favors, much champagne and many photographers.

Thanksgiving she gave a small dinner with just the Peytons, herself, her brother, August Drake and an escort. "Family affair!" August scornfully termed it.

However, on the New Year she again gave a gala celebration, a typical New Year's Eve, and waited, directly back of Anette, as August expressed it, "like a bum in the breadline," to receive a kiss from Laurence Peyton. Anette received a Lyndon kiss, too. From James Lyndon. At the moment she scarcely realized it, because it happened during that stroke-of-twelve screeching of horns, when the din of the streets merged with that in the apartment. During that conglomerated moment everyone shouts, "Happy New Year!" and kisses everyone else.

That was when James Lyndon kissed her. But there was something about that warm pressure on her cheek that made her stop. Even after he had been pushed away by other celebrants she still could feel the caress. It had been different.

Between dates of importance Lois plied them with invitations of no particular meaning. Too, she managed to get herself asked everywhere that she thought Larry and his wife might be.

As Feb. 11 drew near, Larry said, "Don't let wild horses drag it from you that it is our anniversary, or the Holiday Kid will throw a party."

Instead, the pair went to a crazy little backstreet restaurant where no one who knew them would happen to be. They ate baked chicken and drank red wine and sang with two musicians. Larry gave her a ribbon-slim diamond bracelet.

"One row a year. That's what I'm going to give you."

"Won't I be cute when we celebrate our 15th anniversary?"

"It will be a stomacher long before then," he assured her.

So they evaded Lois Lyndon on that momentous anniversary but they could not evade her when, in late spring, August and Larry received a Hollywood offer they could not bring themselves to reject. The blonde heiress went even more hilariously wild than they.

Anette went wild also. She rushed past Betsy into the inner offices of Bradford and Seymour. If she had thought at any time that the producers, because they did not notice her, had forgotten her, she learned differently. They whipped out her contract. She was signed for five years. They had plans for her. She was talented. They did not intend to release her.

She told Larry so when they met that night, after their respective performances, at Lois' supper dance. "But this is different!" he cried angrily. "This is no insignificant part, no overnight separation. I'm going to be famous Anette. I'm going to make so much money you'll never have to work again."

Her smooth brow was troubled, "I know, Larry, but money isn't altogether the point. My work amounts to something, too," she declared. "Even though you may not think it's important compared to yours, I do."

But she changed her mind when she saw him on the terrace later, kissing Lois Lyndon. It wasn't like the other times, because Lois was not kissing Larry. Larry was kissing Lois.

2 Couples Wed

A double wedding ceremony was performed in St. John's Lutheran church in Red House, Sunday afternoon, March 22, when Miss Mabel Van Meter daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tilden VanMeter of Close Mountain became the bride of Lawrence Richard Harsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Harsh of St. George. The bride was attired in a beige ensemble with dusty rose accessories and completed her costume with a corsage of sweet peas. The bridegroom is employed in Washington, D. C., where they will reside.

At the same ceremony, Miss Wanda Bennings of Adrian, Michigan was united in marriage with Wade Ashby of St. George. The bride wore a suit of soldier blue and wore a corsage of spring flowers.

After a brief honeymoon spent in Akron, Ohio, and Adrian Mich. both couples will return to Washington, D. C., where Mr. Harsh and Mr. Ashby are employed.

P-TA Elects

Miss Mary Knaggs of Douglas was elected as president of Douglas Parent-Teacher association at a meeting held in the school this week.

Other officers elected were: Felix Colabrese, vice-president and Miss Lillian Ludden, secretary. Ira McDowell, principal of Davis high school was the guest speaker and spoke on "Civilian Defense in the Schools." A play "Mrs. Maloney's Affections" concluded the program.

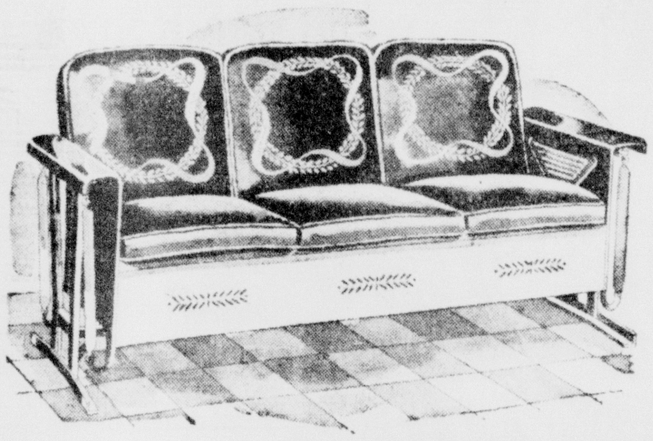
Now, Is the Time to Select Your Porch Furniture



Our order for 1942 gliders and chairs was placed long before the materials were "frozen" for war purposes. Fortunately, now at the beginning of the outdoor season, we present a complete array of the luxuriously comfortable, smartly styled, colorful gliders and chairs with nothing left out. Now when you will have more time to spend on your porch, make it livable. Reserve your selection at once as none will be available later in the season.

There are six different style gliders from which you may choose each in choice of colors. They start as low as $18

Featured in our advanced spring showing is a six-loose cushion glider covered in washable leatherette, coil spring base, wide band suspension, extra deep. It is good looking and comfortable and attractively priced, on a limited quantity at $28

Stubborn Child Made That Way By His Parents

Mothers Should Take Ample Time in Order to Avoid Resistance

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Stubborn children were not born that way. They were made stubborn, by the parents who supposed they were doing their best to prevent stubbornness.

Beginning with the infant, the first problem is to avoid irritating the child in unnecessary resistance. The wise and skillful mother aims not to hamper the child with haste nor crowd him unduly with clothes; neither does she cram his arms and legs hurriedly into a garment nor bathe him as if he were a metal doll. She always takes ample time in order to avoid his resistance and win his cooperation.

When he begins to seize small and dangerous objects from the floor, she gets them from him probably by putting something into the other hand, without stirring up resistance in him. If the object is in his mouth she is still more skillful at getting it from him.

Should she hurry him and cause him to grow angry and resist, she has taught him stubbornness. If, on the contrary, she eventually succeeds in getting him to hand her such foreign objects as he finds, approving him with smiles, tender words and loving pats, she has taught him effectually to cooperate, and not to be stubborn.

When To Spank

When your child begins to walk you will teach him by means of spanking to always avoid a few specific things. As soon as he has learned the meaning of NO, you can change from spanking as punishment to having him sit doing nothing where you can see him for exactly twenty minutes.

Remember, you will use punishment only to keep him from doing the few forbidden things; not to get him to do what you want him to do. Make painful only what he must never do; pleasant what you want him to do.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. What temptation should adoptive parents be especially on guard against?

A. Of supposing, when the adopted child begins to do some bad things, that he inherited these bad traits from his natural parents. He has not. Types of conduct are not inherited as are height, size of head or color of eyes.

and party-line service

NOW that we can no longer get all the copper we need for telephone lines, more and more families will find it necessary to accept party-line telephone service. In doing so they will help to conserve a vital war material.

Party-line service is good service when users on the same line are considerate of each other—when they answer their calls promptly—hold the line no longer than is reasonable and always replace the receiver when they have finished.

A good neighbor policy "along party lines" will give better telephone service to more people.

THE CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE COMPANY OF BALTIMORE CITY

THERE'S LIFE IN THE OLD BOYS YET

You've seen many an electric appliance retired from active service while is was still perfectly good or had only some minor trouble. But now Uncle Sam wants you to repair existing equipment and appliances and keep them in use instead of buying new things.

That doesn't mean you can't buy appliances. You can. At present we have reasonable stocks of most available appliances. But Uncle Sam has cut down on future supplies. So rather than sell these new appliances to the individual who has a good appliance, but just prefers the 1942 model, we'd like to sell them to people who actually need them to replace equipment that's beyond repair or to furnish new homes.

★ CALL THE APPLIANCE DOCTOR ★

And don't decide you need a new appliance because the old one doesn't work. Call the appliance doctor and find out if the trouble's fatal. You'll be surprised how little money and work will make most out-of-order appliances as good as new.

Any Electric Appliance Dealer, including ourselves, will be glad to fix you up and you'll be doing the practical as well as the patriotic thing.

★ MAKING THE BEST USE OF YOUR APPLIANCES ★

Once your appliances are usable do you use them most economically and efficiently? Today they offer real possibilities.

For instance that toaster—will make swell toast from dry bread.

And how long since you've used your waffle iron for a delicious, inexpensive meal.

An electric coffee maker gets the most flavor out of every grain, and grains count nowdays.

In one way or another every electric appliance will save you money and material and give you better service if you'll investigate its possibilities. Your Home Service Representative will be glad to give you suggestions along these lines and this is only one of the many "Home Front" helps she provides. Ask for her services. They're free.

The same principles apply just as well to your business uses of electric equipment. And we have expert free services available for those purposes too. Use them. FOR VICTORY'S SAKE MAKE THE MOST OF WHAT YOU HAVE.

This is the third of four advertisements dealing with the effects of the war on your electric service, and describing special customer services available to you.

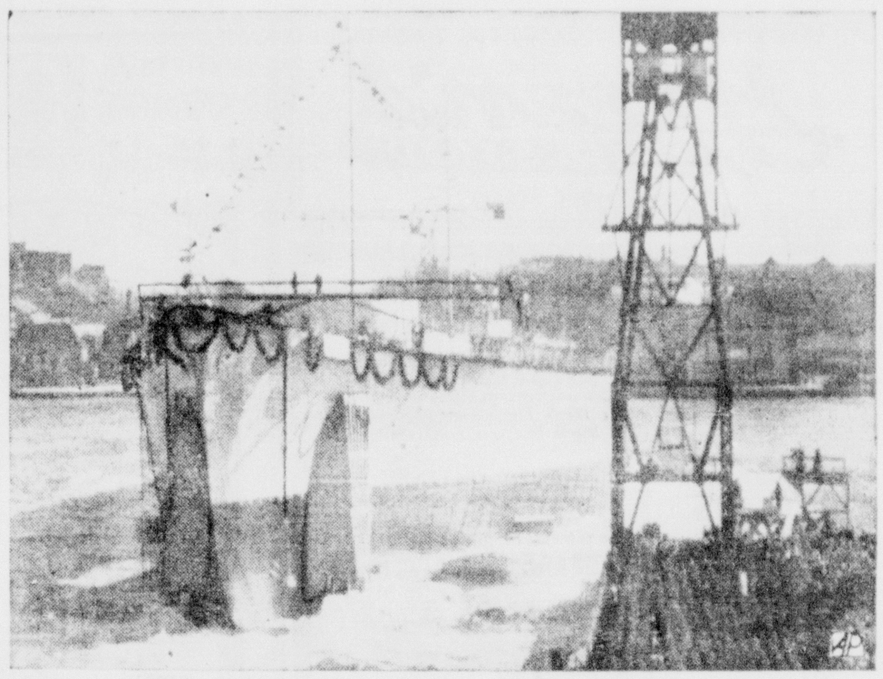
WOODSMEN DIDN'T SPARE THESE TREES—Residents of Lacon, Ill., walk down a branch-littered street after volunteer crews had cut a path through the scores of felled trees. The trees had been broken off by the force of a recent tornado.

SPARKLE—A strange, new Veronica Lake is this (top view) with blonde hair back and both eyes showing, though lowered at the moment. Both she and Joan Fontaine wear elaborate antique-styled necklaces sprinkled with bright diamonds.

TREASURE HUNT FOR GOLF BALLS—Rubber shortage makes recovery of golf balls from water hazards good business in Miami. Diver Paul Thill hands balls to Fred Corcoran.



AT SEA—BUT WHERE?—United Nations speculate on whereabouts of Germany's battleship 35,000-ton Tirpitz (above), pictured in 1939. Tirpitz may be loose on the high seas.

CHAMPIONSHIP FORM—It's no wonder Dave Freeman, 22, of Pasadena, Calif., captures badminton titles, with enthusiasm like this. He'll defend national title at Cincinnati, recently nabbed three state crowns at Beverly Hills.

RIGHT SEASON—At this time of the year, tall lily plants are just the thing to sit under, decides Easter-minded Carey Fletcher. The lilies were at the twenty-ninth International Flower show, displaying blooms at New York City.

OLD FAITHFUL—For 35 years the 60-foot Messenger has operated between Sandusky, Ohio, and several Lake Erie islands whose residents depend on this chunky craft and a sister ship, the Mascot, to bring supplies from the mainland.

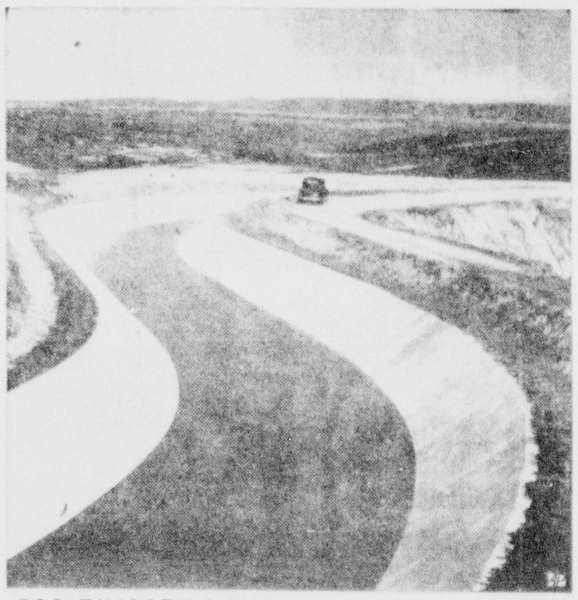
ARMY ALBUM—And what does the American soldier look like? Here are six faces—species U.S.A.—at Fort Benning, Ga.

TRIES—Lou Novikoff, the "Mad Russian," is back with the Chicago Cubs, making his second bid for an outfield berth. He led American Association last year with .370.

A GOOD SIGN—Conduit Rd. in Washington becomes MacArthur Blvd., in tribute to a fighter, Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

HOUSE OF PRAYER—At St. John's Episcopal church (above) in Washington, F.D.R. often worships. It was built in 1816.

NEW POST—Charles W. Taussig (above) of New York has been named co-chairman of an Anglo-American commission designed to strengthen economic and social cooperation in the vital Caribbean. British Sir Frank Stockdale is also a co-chairman.



FOR THIRSTY LAND—Part of the 37-mile-long Madera Canal, which will carry water from California's Friant dam to the Madera irrigation district winds in a S-curve through foothills. Dam is 35 feet wide at the top and 10 feet deep.

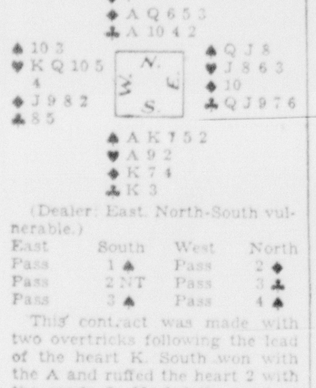
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

ASSET AND LIABILITY

A SINGLETON in your hand may be measured two ways when your partner gives you a choice between a No Trump and a suit contract. In the case of the No Trump it is somewhat of a liability. Though your partner's No Trump bid has indicated safe stopping of that suit, your shortage tends to increase the length of it in the opponents' hands. At a suit contract, the singleton is a definite asset as offering a place where you can use your trumps separately to take additional tricks.



(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♦
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠

This contract was made with two overtricks following the lead of the heart K. South won with the A and ruffed the heart 2 with the spade 6. He led the spade 4 to his A, then ruffed the heart 9 with the spade 9. The diamond K and the spade K were followed then by the diamond 4 to the A, which East ruffed with the spade Q. That was all the trick taking by the opponents, as South had no problem to win the rest.

Several pairs in the same duplicate reached 3-No Trumps. In one case, after South bid the 2-No Trumps on his second turn, North went to 3-No Trumps. In another, when North bid 3-Clubs after the 2-No Trumps on the second round, South went to 3-No Trumps. In still another, after North's second round bid of 3-Clubs and South's correct rebid of 3-Spades, North made a terrifically bad bid of 3-No Trumps. All of the No Trump games were beaten, by the heart K lead. South ran eight consecutive tricks, but then had to lose the lead, whereupon the defenders took the remainder in hearts.

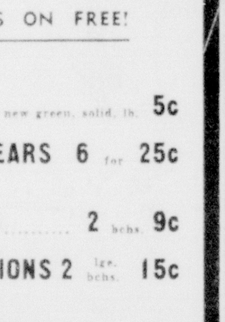
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

If the defenders had not bid and West leads the club 7, how should South play this deal to make 6-Diamonds?

Dr. Clendening Acknowledges 'Boner' As Woman Scientist Sets Him Right

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It appears that not long ago this column pulled a boner, and not ever having posed as being omniscient, it wishes hereby to acknowledge the boner and make a correction.

I was asked the question whether it was healthy to allow plants to remain in the bedroom at night, since it was a general belief that they should be removed. My reply was that with some people certain plants caused allergic symptoms, especially primrose, but that otherwise I saw no reason why they should be unhealthy since plant inspiration was the opposite of ours and the plants gave off oxygen and took in carbon dioxide while we took in oxygen and gave off carbon dioxide.

Glad To Be Set Right

I stand corrected by the courtesy of Miss Jane Baker, of the science class of the Gabriel Richard School, Grosse Pointe, Michigan. She writes me: "Your answer didn't make clear that during sunlight hours green plants use carbon dioxide and sunlight to make their food or chlorophyll; this process being photosynthesis. However, at night plants carry on respiration using oxygen and exhaling carbon dioxide as we do. Isn't this the important reason for taking out plants from patients' rooms? It seems to me, if the plants presented allergic stimuli, they would be kept out of the room permanently."

Miss Baker is entirely right and I am very grateful to her. I confess I did not know this fact about the day and night inspiration of plants at all. I feel very much as did Dr. Johnson when somebody asked him why he made a boner in one of the definitions in his dictionary. He replied, "Ignorance, Madam, pure ignorance."

Voluntary Goose Flesh

The following question was sent by a reader:

"I have read of a man who is able voluntarily to make the small hairs on his arms stand up. Is this possible?"

Each hair has a small muscle attached to it in such a fashion that when the muscle contracts the hair stands up. In common parlance, goose flesh. The action is involuntary and the muscle is of the kind that is called involuntary or not under the control of the will. Still, in certain animals the action is voluntary—for instance, the cockatoo can raise the feathers on top of its head, and the mechanism is the same.

One actual case in man is recorded. Dr. Donald D. Lindsay showed a motion picture before the American Psychological Association which showed a man who could raise the hair on his arms whenever he wanted to. Not only that, he can get into a cold shower and keep the goose flesh from coming up. He discovered he could do this when he was ten years old.

Rudiments of Muscles

Like most people who discover they have some peculiar ability when they are young, he probably constantly practiced it. We all have the rudiments of little muscles that could potentially move the ears. In the lower animals these are, of course, well developed but in most of us they are completely atrophied. But every once in a while you find someone who has developed them.

The Empress Maria Louise could move her ears at will and even fold them up. It was one of the great distractions at court and Napoleon would hasten to the salon whenever the empress felt in the mood to give an exhibition.

Questions and Answers

A. F.:—I have been told that I have vitamin K deficiency. What foods contain vitamin K? I have been taking kayquinone tablets. How much vitamin K should one take?

Answer: It is generally believed that the artificial, synthetic chemical products such as kayquinone tablets which contain vitamin K are better than the natural foods which contain it, such as the grasses and green vegetables. The amount of vitamin K which is needed depends upon the level of prothrombin in the blood and this can only be determined by a laboratory test, so it is unwise to take it except under a doctor's care.

All the Dividends Go to One Place

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—When W. H. Van Demeer was about to enter the army he organized the firm of Van Demeer, Inc., and named himself president with six vice presidential assistants.

Each vice president was a friend, a woman selected because of special talents. One was given the responsibility of sending Van Demeer fried chicken once a month; another was in charge of chocolate cake shipments; another the angel food cake and cookie shipments; one will keep him supplied with socks and mufflers; another with sweaters and the sixth will keep him supplied with magazines.

Each vice president received an ornate certificate of appointment and a list of duties.

Gas-Powered Gun Claimed by Inventor

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Reports of a gasoline-powered machine-gun which shoots three times as fast as any now in use have filtered into the capital—but the Mexican General Staff is taking them with considerable salt.

Luis Robert Gamiz Navarro, a Quadalajara civil engineer, said the gun he invented has two different cooling systems and will shoot bullets of .28, .32 or .36 calibre. Furthermore, he said, it is almost silent, very light, and cheap to fire.

"Does everything but fry eggs, doesn't it?" said one member of the General Staff. "Officially, we don't know anything about it and we'd have to see it to believe it.

"Of course, if it were true we wouldn't tell you anyway."

VITAMINS help fight off Colds

1. Danger months are here! Colds are at their peak. Now is the time to be doubly careful. Get plenty of sleep. Eat good food. Take lots of exercise. And be sure you get enough vitamins and minerals. For lack of them can mean lowered resistance to colds. If you've been low on vitamins, you may be surprised at how they help you fight off colds. Today you can get all the vitamins you may need at the lowest cost ever. They are in pleasant tablet form. Just ask for Vimms.

2. Your doctor knows that deficiencies in a single vitamin are rare. And no 1 or 2 vitamins can do the work of the others. There are 6 vitamins known to be essential in nutrition. And Vimms give you all six. A and D, of course! Plenty of C, too. And all three necessary B Complex vitamins (B_1, B_2 and P-P). And that's not all. For minerals are fully as important as vitamins. So Vimms give you three most essential minerals—Calcium, Phosphorus and Iron.

3. And America needs you fit. We can't afford the 50,000,000 wasted days that colds alone cost every year. That's doubly true in wartime. If you have frequent colds—if you're always tired, jumpy, irritable, you may be one of the "3 out of 4" who need more vitamins and minerals, according to Government experts.

When you keep up your resistance with vitamins and minerals, you may feel much better, too. Add Vimms to your whole family's diet today and every day. No other product of comparable type and potency costs you so little.

American Vessel Sinks a U-Boat In the Caribbean

Captain of Freighter Reports Ramming Submarine; Crew Drowns

NEW ORLEANS, March 26 (AP)—The navy tonight announced that an American freighter on Feb. 18 ran down and sank what presumably was an enemy submarine in the Caribbean, and that despite an intensive ten-hour search no survivors were found.

Lt. Commander Henry Johnson, U. S. Naval reserve, captain of the ship, said that in total darkness and late at night his ship sighted a form ahead twenty seconds before the collision. There was a light flashed from the object, which was partly submerged.

The freighter then crashed into the object headon with a heavy jolt and passed over it. Before the ship could turn about members of the crew heard a heavy explosion, presumably of a torpedo, and heard screams. Two men were believed sighted in the water.

The freighter returned to the spot and spent ten hours searching for survivors. None was found. The ship proceeded on its course, arriving here recently. Repairs were made and the ship will return to service.

The Eighth naval district headquarters here late tonight gave out Commander Johnson's story, the first official announcement of the action. Naval intelligence refused pictures of the freighter.

Commander Johnson said the running down of the submarine was a pure accident. His ship was running without lights at the time.

Protests Rationing Of Gas in West Va.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 26 (AP)—West Virginia, which produces more oil than it uses, is being discriminated against by being included among the nineteen states in which gasoline will be rationed, Carl G. Bachman, state civilian defense coordinator, declared tonight.

"The people in Ohio and Kentucky will not be rationed, while the people in West Virginia will have to have a gasoline ration book to buy gasoline," he said in a radio broadcast.

Why this is so, Bachman added, could not be learned from any official in Washington.

"If the oil and gas producing states, such as Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, California, Louisiana, Ohio and Kentucky are to be eliminated, (from the rationing order) why should an oil and gas producing state like West Virginia be listed with the non - producing states?" he asked.

American Freighter Sunk by Japanese

NEW YORK, March 26 (AP)—The torpedo-sinking of an American freighter by a Japanese submarine only ten miles off Madras, India, last Jan. 29 was disclosed today by the Third naval district.

The crew of thirty-eight rowed ashore and twenty-three survivors headed by Capt. Thomas Eckhart arrived here March 23.

Naval officers said the ship was about an hour out of Madras when the first torpedo hit. A second torpedo struck and the vessel sank in twenty-minute.

Marine circles in New York reported the loss Feb. 5 but naval officials declined comment at the time.

Madras, situated on the Bay of Bengal, is along the Allied supply line to Calcutta and the Burma Road. The sinking was the farthest point west that Japanese submarines are known to have penetrated.

Jennie Lee Sure Sir Stafford Is Man To Win India

Former Member of Parliament Sees Early Agreement with Nehru

By AMY PORTER

NEW YORK, March 26 (AP)—Nehru, popular Indian leader, and Sir Stafford Cripps, England's fair-haired man of the moment, used to sit down to friendly conversations about the state of the world and how to improve it, and a young woman generally sat with the.i.

That young woman, Jennie Lee, was a politician herself, with sufficient perspicacity to contribute her share to their hopeful plans.

Miss Lee, who has been living in New York for several months working on a book, has no fear for the outcome of Cripps' mission to India, "If England gives him the necessary backing."

Because, she says, "Stafford wants for India exactly what India wants for herself — absolute, unqualified independence.

Praises Sir Stafford

"He has said so and what he says he means, and what he means he will act upon though it should result in his personal downfall. This is the key to Stafford, and the reason so many people do not understand him.

"Stafford may make mistakes but he will never cheat. Nehru knows this after eight or nine years of personal friendship, and Nehru is India's key man."

What England must do, Miss Lee says, is "give Stafford a blank check to be filled out by Nehru."

"Then," Miss Lee continues, "India will give full and free cooperation in our war effort."

Served in Parliament

Miss Lee has earned her right to speak of English politics with authority. Elected to Parliament at the age of twenty-four she has gone on to political positions of increasing importance.

She and Sir Stafford were members of different parties but Cripps became the guiding light of her group.

After the war started, Lord Beaverbrook himself, minister of production and one of her former political opponents, asked Miss Lee to take over the task of stimulating aircraft workers to greater production.

Miss Lee arranged for the first night shift ever to work in an aircraft factory.

"By asking, not demanding, labor's help in winning the war, we got the workers to keep on producing in spite of the blitz," she says.

MacArthur Once Taken Prisoner By U. S. Forces

Mistaken for Enemy in World War No. 1 and Held by Troops

BALTIMORE, Md., March 26 (AP)—General Douglas MacArthur successfully ran the Japanese gantlet from Bataan to Australia, but he was captured in World War one—and by American troops.

The incident is recalled by Dr. Hugh Young, celebrated surgeon who served overseas, and head of the Brady Urological institute at Johns Hopkins hospital. He writes in his autobiography:

"At Buzancy I met the surgeon of the Forty-second division, Colonel Fairchild, who was greatly excited because he had had to evacuate two wounded members of General MacArthur's staff who had been fired upon by a detachment of our own troops of the first division.

"As the American armies rushed northward after the rapidly retreating Germans, Sedan was just in front of the Forty-second division. To their left was the Fourth French army.

"Owing to the historic significance of Sedan to every Frenchman, Marshal Foch had issued an order placing Sedan in the battle lines of the French and turning the American attack well to the right, so that Sedan would not fall to our troops.

"General Pershing thought he had persuaded General Maistre, Fourth French army, to offer no objection to American divisions taking Sedan if the French were not there to do it. General Pershing then let it be known by an order of General Liggett that he was anxious for American troops to capture Sedan and that all divisional lines could be disregarded.

"The First division was several miles to the right, but liberty to enter the race for the great prize—Sedan—was too much to be resisted. They turned and dashed across through the lines of the Seventy-seventh division in the lines of the Forty-second, which had been stopped by Marshal Foch just before they entered Sedan.

"No restraining orders had been issued to the first division, and on they rushed in the black of the night into the Forty-second. Encountering a group of men whom they supposed to be Germans, the men of the First (division) fired upon this group, captured them and took them back. These men protested that they were American officers, but as they wore no insignia during battle, and General MacArthur had a peculiar uniform and cap unlike any other American, the soldiers of the First laughed at him when he claimed to be commander of the Eighty-fourth brigade.

"As none of the lieutenants or captains of the front line of the first division recognized him, it was not until General MacArthur was taken well back that he came across an officer who knew him."

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With Axis and Allies alike fishing in troubled political waters for fresh battle resources, Prime Minister Churchill's declaration to a London audience that the Allies "cannot lose except through our own fault" has pointed meaning.

The Balkan and Indian maneuvers sharply underscore Churchill's reference to "the combined, overwhelming strength" in both material resources and manpower which is available to the Allies, if successfully mobilized. London estimates that Hitler is seeking to recruit 750,000 new troops in the balkans. The Cripps mission to India is pointed at an all but inexhaustible manpower resourvoir for the Allies.

That is only part of what Churchill had in mind; but it is a very critical element in the war situation at this moment. Political manuevering in the Balkans and in India necessarily displaces battle happenings in first interest since success or failure by either side could deeply influence the immediate as well as the future course of the war.

Britain Needs India

Assured of whole-hearted entry of India into the struggle, Britain could view the widening Japanese attack on empire life lines in Burma and the Indian ocean as only another temporary phase. Japanese penetrations of the British-Chinese lines in Burma have not yet assumed critical proportions.

There is much information on this side of the Atlantic, however, to justify London assertions that Hitler is playing with fire in the Balkans. The intermixed nationalities and warring ambitions and interests of the political powder barrel make it a dangerous place to strike sparks.

Only by a mixture of threats and promises did Hitler weave the insecure pattern of Axis affiliation in Rumania, Hungary and Bulgaria. Now he is seeking to expand it with out benefit of his promised smashing victory in Russia. Yet to allied eyes the major factor involved in the Nazi Balkan recruiting drive must be the indication it clearly gives that Hitler is reaching the bottom of the barrel of his own war resources in manpower as well as oil.

With King Boris of Bulgaria and the Nazi war ace diplomat, Von Papen, reported now in conference with Hitler, the crisis in the Balkan fecruiting maneuver cannot be long delayed.

Some London experts gleefully predict Hitler may lose instead of gain strength. He may be forced to send additional German garrisons to keep order in the Balkans to prevent a war-within—war behind his back. The bribes in territory and sea outlet control he probably is offering are not yet his to hand out.

Japanese efforts to dip a finger into the Indian political whirlpool are also noted, coupled with the first Japanese seizure in the Andamans of Indian footholds. That move, however, may prove to be strictly limited and purely military significance.

Isolated Chinese Army, Surrounded, Keeps on Fighting

Situation at Toungoo Well in Hand, Official Statement Says

NEW DELHI, INDIA, March 26 (AP)—Ringed completely and attacked time after time for thirty-six hours, the Chinese forces at Toungoo, isolated left anchor of the Allied Central Burma line, held even their outermost defenses intact tonight against Japanese pressing from all sides.

The invaders had by-passed Toungoo on the eastern Rangoon-Mandalay road, taken Kyungon, twelve miles to the north and still held the Toungoo airdrome, eight miles above the city, but still they could not budge the entrenched Chinese about Toungoo itself.

On the other main road to Central Burma, the Irrawaddy valley route to Prome and the oil fields 140 miles farther north, the Japanese were moving in force, peppering the country ahead of them with parachute troops dropped from the skies to organize Burmese Fifth Columnists.

One large mixed enemy force was forty miles south of Prome, another some twenty-five miles behind it.

Gen. H.R.L.G. Alexander issued this late communique:

"Strong Japanese forces were attacking Tungoo from all sides today, with the Chinese defenders throwing them back time after time.

Situation "Well in Hand"

"The Chinese general commanding there states that 'the situation is well in hand' despite the fact that Toungoo is now surrounded.

"The Chinese had set up a defense in depth at Toungoo and despite repeated attacks, which had gone on for about thirty-six hours, the Japanese have failed to penetrate the Chinese outer line of defense.

"To reduce it to bowling alley language, the Chinese attitude at Tungoo appears to be: 'You set them up and we will knock them down.'"

Steel Output Is 90 P. C. for War, Weir Points Out

Report on National Corporation's Efforts Shows Much Accomplished

PITTSBURGH, March 26 (AP) — More than ninety per cent of National Steel Corporation's output is going directly or indirectly into war production, Chairman E. T. Weir told stockholders today, adding that the output will be increased by new facilities.

During 1941, Weir said in the corporation's annual report, the company spent $18,400,000 for improvements, including two 1,200-ton blast furnaces in Ohio valley and Great Lakes area plants and the reconstruction of a third furnace. An additional $12,000,000 will be spent in 1942, he said, on other equipment including two new electrolytic lines costing about $3,250,000.

The work will be financed entirely by the company, he reported.

Weir said the company would be "engaged permanently in the steel plate business to a much greater extent than heretofore."

Reporting net earnings of $17,102,350 in 1941, equal to $7.75 per share on capital stock, Weir said.

"With much heavier taxation in prospect and the cost of doing business increasing, it is certain that earnings cannot continue to be in the same proportion to operations as in 1941. The best long range interest of the corporation will be served by maintaining reserves that will enable us not only to keep all properties in a high state of current efficiency but also to prepare against the impact of post war conditions."

Kensington Mayor Protests Housing Plan

KENSINGTON, Md., March 26 (AP)—Mayor Robert L. Lewis of Kensington said today his community would hold a mass meeting to protest against construction of more than 800 demountable homes for war workers in nearby Garrett Park.

He said he had been besieged by calls from residents of Kensington since plans to erect the houses were announced yesterday by John Ihlder, executive officer of the Dwelling Authority in Washington.

Referring to a statement by Ihlder that the site had been chosen after consultation with county and municipal officials, Lewis declared "I have been unable to find a single county official who favored the project or an official body agreeing to the proposed con-

Hershey Says All Young and Healthy Must Enter War

Married as Well as Single To Be Called, Director Asserts

BALTIMORE, March 26 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey today gave the armed forces top priority rating on the services of all the nation's healthy young men, single or not.

Foreseeing "very definite manpower shortages" within the next six or nine months, the national director of selective service said "every able bodied man—young—eventually will enter the war."

He told the Federal Business Association — composed of heads of United States departments and agencies in Maryland—that there would "be no manpower available for unnecessary jobs. . . . The time is at hand when we must decide what we can do without.

"Government must take the lead in the elimination of unnecessary things. . . . Government is faced now with deciding what functions are essential to winning the war. It must use a minimum of men. It must use the least—if you will—desirable men. The day of the ideal man for a job is temporarily past."

Brains in management and the "abolishment of red tape" must take the place of men, Hershey said.

Asked about the status of married men, Hershey again returned to future needs of the armed forces. The United States never, he said, "permitted dependency as a reason for not having enough men in the forces."

He said he saw no reason for deferment of farmers who produced only enough for their own needs and did not contribute to the nation's food basket.

"Gigantic" Nazi Spy Ring Broken

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 26 (AP)—Police Chief Filinto Muller announced tonight that a "gigantic" Nazi spy ring centering in Rio De Janeiro had been smashed with the arrest of 200 operatives and the seizure of four powerful secret radio stations.

The official report charged that the Nazis had been using this capital as a world clearing house for espionage.

It declared that war secrets from the United States, England and many other nations had been spirited here in complete detail.

The information from various sources was assembled and assayed here, and the most important conclusions and deductions were forwarded to Germany, the official report said.

Divorces Increase In State of Maryland

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP)—Maryland granted 3,227 divorces in 1940—1.8 per 1,000 population—compared with 2,644 in 1939 when the rate per 1,000 was 1.5, the Bureau of Census reported.

The entire country had an estimated 264,000 divorces, or 2.0 per 1,000. The rate ranged from 47.1 in Nevada to less than 0.1 in South Carolina where state law permits only the granting of annulments.

Excluding the two extremes, the rates for other states ranged from 5.9 in Florida to 0.8 in Delaware, New Jersey, New York and North Dakota.

Maryland's 1940 rate exceeded that of the previous three years. In 1937, 2,833 divorces were granted, or 1.6 per 1,000 population. The following year it dipped to 2,432, or 1.4 per 1,000.

Bataan Soldiers Look to M'Arthur To Provide Help

Troops Highly Pleased with His Appointment as Commander

By DEAN SCHEDLER

WITH THE USAFFE ON BATAAN PENINSULA, March 20.—(Delayed) (AP)—Word that their commander, General Douglas MacArthur, had been made supreme Allied commander in the Southwest Pacific area sent a great thrill through the embattled American and Philippine forces who called it "the answer to our prayers."

The fighting spirit that has permeated these troops since the start of the war was unshaken by the immediate Japanese propaganda that their general had deserted Bataan in favor of other Pacific areas. The barometer of troop opinion of their commander skyrocketed and, although thousands of miles distant, they firmly believed their needs would be uppermost in General MacArthur's plans.

All Praise Appointment

Buck privates and officers alike joined in the chorus of praise for the appointment. They commended MacArthur's choice of Lieut. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright to succeed him in the Philippines. Typical of the comment by officers was the statement of one that MacArthur's appointment was the "best break of the war so far.

General Wainwright has the reputation of being the most frontgoing general around here. His responsibility has vastly increased in the new situation, and I found his staff felt the promotion had been earned by his long, hard weeks of fighting in Luzon.

I asked General Wainwright for a statement on the new situation. He replied there was no change but that he had plans that would be effected gradually.

Churchill Calls Upon Britons To Give Best Effort

Prime Minister Sees Turn for the Better in Course of the War

LONDON, March 26 (AP)—Winston Churchill foresaw with measured caution today a turn for the better in the course of the war and called earnestly upon Britons for a rigid stock-taking to "make sure that our fellow countrymen and our Allies have the best service from us that we can give. . . ."

The Prime Minister was addressing the annual meeting of the Central Council of Conservative and Unionist Associations—the inner circle of the nation's upper-class leadership. It was an earnest plea for unity of both Britons and United Nations and it included the unequivocal statement that Churchill would stamp out what he called propaganda calculated "to disturb the army or weaken the confidence of the country and the armed forced in the qualities and character of our devoted corps of officers."

Says Battle "Has Worsened"

Churchill's prediction of a turn in the tide of misfortune was qualified with acknowledgement that the Battle of the Atlantic for the time being "has worsened again" and a somber assurance that there will be much more trouble. But he added:

". . . This I will venture to say: just as last year I warned you that you could not expect to have successes unchecked by reverses, so now in 1942 we need not to have reverses unrelieved by successes."

Now, he said, it seems very likely that Britain and her allies "cannot lose this war . . . except through our own fault, or their own fault, or our own failure to use our combined strength . . . and to use the multiplying opportunities which, as the months pass, will present themselves to us."

He gave this word picture of the war task:

Scope World-Wide

"Its numerous and fearful problems reach down to the very foundations of human society. Its scope is world-wide and it involves all nations—every man, woman and child in them.

"Strategy and economics are interwoven. Sea, land and air are but a single service. The latest refinements of science are linked with the cruelty of the stone age.

"Workshop and fighting line are one. All may fall, all will stand, together. We must aid each other. We must stand by each other."

News of General MacArthur's leaving was a complete secret and first knowledge of it came in the announcement by the War department in Washington March 17.

Army Relief To Get $50,000 from Fight

Louis Will Risk Title for Nothing Against Simon

Will Be Second Time in Three Months Champion Fights for Servicemen

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK, March 25 (AP)—For the first time in the history of the fight game, Uncle Sam will turn loose one of his own military nephews to fight for the heavyweight championship of the world tomorrow night.

And for the second time in less than three months, Joe Louis (now Buck Private J. Louis Barrow of Uncle Sam's army) will defend that richest of all fistic prizes for exactly nothing — neither money, marbles or chalk.

He will take off those heavy soldier shoes, walk into Madison Square Garden's ring at 10 p. m. (E.W.T.) before about 16,000 customers—well sprinkled with army and navy official gold braid—and proceed to operate on one Abraham Simon, a good-natured, confident 250-pound giant from Long Island, whom he chopped down in thirteen rounds just about a year ago.

$125,000 Gate Likely

There should be somewhere between $125,000 and $150,000 in the till by post-time, according to more-or-less official communiques from Promoter Mike Jacobs' ticket office outposts, but neither Joe nor Mike will wind up with a quarter out of the pot.

Best estimates are that some $50,000 to $60,000 will be piled on the army relief bankroll from tomorrow's tea party, with Louis and Jacobs kicking in their entire profits, Simon contributing a portion of his purse and the Garden splitting its share down the middle with the fund.

That's the way it came out exactly eleven weeks ago tomorrow night when Louis worked on the California skyscraper, Buddy Baer, for the benefit of the Navy Relief Society. From that one, the navy

Ira Wolfert Says Maybe U. S. Should Send Flock of Game Cocks to Bataan

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH, March 26—Before going to the main where the illegal sport happens and the deaths take place, we went with a game cock man to the farm where his chickens train.

There are some millions of cock-fight people in this country, all of them risking jail regularly during the season from Thanksgiving to about July 4. Some of them are bayou colored boys or Pennsylvania miners or Indiana cinder-snappers with one beloved chicken that they cry over when it takes its death, and some of them are millionaires with thousands of chickens, fighting mains and derbies all over the country.

$10,000 Stake

A main is where one man watches his flock of chickens against another man's flock while a derby is a tournament from which a champion emerges. The big derbies are held every year in Florida and one of them, carrying a $10,000 stake, was won the other day by a Wisconsin man with a breed of chicken called Pierce shufflers.

Down in this part of the United States, most of the game-cockers are race horse and show horse people with a fair share of wealthy women among them who fight their chickens for anything you'd like from five cents to $50,000 any time of the day or night. All you have to do is knock on the door and ask.

The man who took us to the farm where his chickens train started fooling with a cock of the walk, a favorite of his, a cranky, runty-looking old battler, five now and with sour eyes and soured-up wrinkles in its wattles. In a minute or two the cock took after the man who's been loving him steadily all these years. Dick is the man's name. The cock weighed about six pounds and stood no taller than a quarter of the way up Dick's shins, but Dick turned and scooted all the same, running quite a piece down the road before he felt sure the cock had let up on him.

I seemed girlish to run away from a chicken—a regular-looking chicken, clucking and strutting and drawling and picking and scratching just like all the chickens there ever were. But Dick said any one of those game cocks could break a man's leg with one wallop of its naked foot, a blow that would be feinted so shrewdly and would land so fast no animal could guard against it.

Then the farmer there, a big, amble-rhythmed, loop-shaped man told this story of what had happened earlier in the week when a hound had appeared and started to rough up a chicken. The dog weighed sixty pounds and is known in the neighborhood as a raspy-natured killer dog and when he decided to eat a bite of chicken, he lunged teeth first and body thrown sidewise to block escape.

Blitzed by Rooster

The chicken was head on to him when he started his lunge, but that wasn't where it was when the dog finished. A killer hound strikes as fast as a snake, but the chicken is faster and ran right around him and got on his back and drove its naked spur into the dog's flank right up to the hilt and with all the force with which a sledge hammer drives a nail. First the right flank, then the left flank and the right flank again, the dog twisting and snapping and rolling over and over until finally the dog ran howling under the side of the house, using the house to scrape the chicken off his back.

Dick got to cock-fighting in the normal way. It was in the air all around him and in his family and, as a boy, he started fighting bantams against other boy's bantams for marbles. You can get a bantam rooster for thirty-five or forty cents where a game cock might cost anything at all up to a thousand dollars and bantams are good for kids because there is no murder in them. When it sees it's losing, it gives up and runs away.

But game cocks are murderers. Their proud, high-strutting, bronze-over beauty is their chief attraction, but the murder in them is what has kept them going for thousands of years against all kinds of laws as a sport. This we will try to prove to you tomorrow.—North American Newspaper Alliance.

CLEVELAND DOES NOT WANT NEWSOM

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The Cleveland Indians, to put it mildly, want no part of Louis Norman (Buck) Newsom, the Tigers' big holdout problem.

General Manager Jack Zeller of Detroit came here today with the announced hope of making a deal with Cleveland in which the Tiger pitcher would be a principal. The Indians were among six American League clubs which previously spurned a chance to claim Newsom at the waiver price of $7,500.

"We don't want him on our team," Zeller quoted General Manager Roger Peckinpaugh of Cleveland as saying.

Peckinpaugh disclosed that Newsome had telephoned him to ask the Indians to make a trade for him.

"I asked Newsom how much salary he wanted," Peckinpaugh said. "When he answered $25,000 the conversation ended."

Zeller said the Indians didn't even display casual interest in making any kind of a swap whereby Jeff Heath, their .340 batting outfielder, would become a Tiger.

Hence, the only American League team that is interested in Newsom—even at the waiver price—is Washington.

Yankees Defeat Boston in Thirteenth

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The New York Yankees came from behind with two runs in the thirteenth inning today to nose out the Boston Red Sox, 3-2.

With the score deadlocked at 1-1, the teams played eight scoreless innings before Bobby Doerr's homer put the Sox ahead in the first of the thirteenth. But Rookie Norman Brown, the third Boston pitcher, entered the game and walked Buddy Hassett and Tom Henrich.

Charlie Keller singled Hassett home with the tying run and Bill Dickey, playing his second game of the spring, broke up the contest with a single that scored Keller after two were out.

College Sports Budgets Slashed To Save Money

Other Schools Are Likely To Follow Example Set by Yale

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, March 26 (Wide World)—The emphasis right now is on physical condition, with our colleges encouraged to expand their athletic programs to include youths whose exercise normally would end with the exercise of their right not to exercise.

Such a program of expansion would seem to call for an increase in the staff of sports instructors. So what happens?

Yale whacks three coaches from its payroll. Those guys ought to be unionized, then they could picket the joint, carrying placards reading, "Yale unfair to organized coaches. Local No. 324." And urge sports fans to boycott the Yale bowl. The fans did last fall, at that.

The dismissals weren't "for conduct unbecoming a Dodger," as Leo Durocher would say. The action was in the interest of economy and nobody can say that isn't a sound reason, as you can't buy peanuts without a nickle. However, it must be quite a blow to the Eli Grads to learn that their venerable and snooty alma mater practically is on relief from the athletic department's standpoint.

Others Curtail Budgets

Yale makes no bones about its financial predicament, and must be given credit for that. The most unfortunate part of the situation concerns the three amputated coaches, one of whom gets a pension out of it at least. He'd only been there about twenty-eight years, and probably knew when he took the job that it wasn't permanent.

Other schools are more or less inadvertently curtailing their sports budgets. These are the schools whose high - priced coaches have taken leaves of absence to join the service. In most instances no effort was made to bring in a replacement at an equivalent salary. Assistants were moved up to fill the gaps, and although the new acting head coach might be given a nominal raise in recognition of his increased responsibilities, there isn't much chance that he'll draw down the wages his absent boss was getting.

Getting back to Yale, it's an odd and none too complimentary situation when an ivy-draped institution which might be expected to set the pace for comprehensive athletic programs is forced to admit it hasn't got a pot to cook its sports in, particularly when schools of more recent vintage which the Elis wouldn't ride in the same cab with, athletically speaking, sail serenely along, paying more substantial salaries (to the coaches, of course).

Crowds May Decrease

Perhaps Yale has had a glimpse of the handwriting on the wall and is just a step ahead of other schools in the retrenchment program. Stanford with the resignation of Clark Shaughnessy, announces it will ease up on sports, with the tendency toward less formal schedules.

It seems fairly certain right now that next fall will see a sharp decrease in football crowds, and a decrease in crowds means a decrease in funds available to carry on extensive athletic programs. That would indicate a slash in the coaching staffs.

But if they cut the coaching staffs, how are the schools going to expand their programs to include more students? It sounds like trying to grow more apples by pulling out a few trees. Those boys are going to need somebody to organize and conduct their sports.

But maybe we underestimate our collegians. Maybe all they need is somebody to point out the direction of the goal, and that's been done already. It's physical fitness so they'll be ready to go if and when their country needs them. They'll find a way to get there some way.

MOST VALUABLE

The play of Rudy Baric, guard on the University of West Virginia basketball team, helped the Mountaineers capture the National collegiate invitational tournament in New York. Baric, who led his team to victory over Long Island university, Toledo university and Western Kentucky State, was named the most valuable player in the tourney.

Dodds Does Not Run Right, His Former Coach Says

FALLS CITY, Neb., March 26 (AP)—Gil Dodds, the Boston A.A. athlete, isn't running his races the way his old Nebraska tutor, Lloyd Hahn, would have him do it.

Hahn, Olympic track star of the twenties, doesn't believe in going all out at the start of a race—the way Dodds has been running recently.

The Nebraska farmer, who trained Dodds during high school and college, says "the runner out in front has a mental strain. He is forcing himself and he is not relaxed.

"The secret of distance running is to be relaxed and save up your energy. That's the reason the boys back East fight to keep from setting the pace."

Hahn proposes that Eastern promoters install a mechanical dummy to act as a pacer, similar to the bunny used at dog tracks.

"That would take away all the guess work, eliminate the mental strain and make for faster mile races," Hahn declared.

Two Hot Managers

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 26—Here's a free tip on how to find something hotter than a Florida sun in late March. Sit on the bench during a ball game with either Leo Durocher or Billy Southworth. We gave it a try. If you're not on fire within five minutes you must be wearing asbestos underwear.

They had the two hottest teams, emotionally, in baseball last season and they are liable to have the two hottest this season. Neither manager misses a trick or a turn of any sort from the bench, and both unravel a vocal cataclysm that stuns your eardrums. They keep on top of their men, roughly or soothingly, harsh or gently, through the entire game.

Neither the tumult nor the shouting ever dies with this pair. And as their hired men happen to believe in the sagacity and smartness of both, they get winning results.

Durocher Speaking

"You've got to have the right man for the right job at hand—some batters can hit the ball on a hit and run, others can't—that Brown of the Cardinals can do anything—so can Arky Vaughn—you're looking at two great third basemen when you see these two fellows—I wouldn't trade my infield for any infield in either league—watch Camilli this year — watch Reiser and Reese—watch 'em all."

You get about the same brand from Southworth.

"I'll keep my infield and let Durocher have his. I'll keep my ball club and let Durocher have his. Yeah, he's got Pete Reiser. But what about Terry Moore?"

About Terry Moore

So I asked Durocher, "What about Terry Moore?"

Leo ducks no query of any type.

"I'll tell you about Terry Moore," he said. "As a defensive outfielder he is the greatest I ever saw, and I'm barring neither Tris Speaker nor Joe DiMaggio. He can go further and faster than either, can cover more ground, and kill off more long hits. Terry Moore is an outfielding marvel. That's how good Terry Moore is. But for all that no outfielder in our league is going to match the .360 or better Pete Reiser may hit this year. And don't think Pete is any fly-ball punk."

With Lou Boudreau

We spent a much quieter day with Lou Boudreau, the Cleveland Kid, who as far as one can judge at this early spot is turning out a fine piece of managerial work.

Boudreau is a good-looking young fellow with a keen, determined-looking face. He isn't worrying about his youth—or his job. At the age of 24—he won't be 25 until July 17—the ex-Illinois star, has full command of his men. They like him and respect him. So far they are giving him the best they have, which may not be too much.

"The best we can hope for," he said, "with Feller missing, is to give the Red Sox a battle for third place or stave off some first-division drive from the Browns or Tigers. Outside of the Yankees we should have a good scramble in this league, with the White Sox rated second.

"Whatever happens or wherever we finish, I think you'll see this Cleveland club giving the best it has all year. As a matter of fact, I believe you'll see a better spirit in baseball this season everywhere than you've seen before. Players are beginning to realize these are serious times for everybody. It is certainly no time for anyone to start loafing or to break training."

On to Joe Cronin

Joe Cronin, like all other seven American League managers, knows that the chance of beating out the Yankees moves over into the super-miracle class. While anything can happen in this bizarre world, the heavens still haven't fallen.

"Outside of first place we should have a good race," the Red Sox leader says. "I suppose everyone will pick the White Sox to finish second through their pitching. But we might get there, although like many others we've lost good men to the services.

"Under the conditions that govern things this season it is hard to say what will happen. If Ted Williams has another year even close to 1941, we can furnish our share of trouble—to anybody. We have been getting better pitching than

Allegany Girls Land Four Places On All-Star Team

Ruth Fradiska, Scoring Champion, Is Unanimously Selected

Allegany high school girls' basketball team placed three players on the Western Maryland Interscholastic League's All-Star team this year. Allegany, coached by Mary Virginia Cooper, won the league championship being undefeated in league games and dethroned Central high 1940-41 champions.

1942 GIRLS' WMI ALL-STAR TEAM

Ruth Fradiska, the Campers hustling forward, who carried off high scoring honors for the season, was the only unanimous choice on the 1942 edition which includes seven players instead of the usual six because of a tie vote for one of the guard positions.

Other Allegany players named were Shirley Diedrich, Shirley McMillan and Gretchen Williams, the whole contingent of Blue and White first string guards. Williams was a first team choice last year.

Inskeep Honored Third Time

Barton and Fort Hill were the other schools to get players on the first team, Phyllis Inskeep being named to a forward post for the third straight season for Barton and Ruth Stitcher getting a guard position for the Fort Hill lassies the second season in a row.

Inskeep and Fradiska were out-

Tigers Look Stronger Than Expected

Writer Declares They Are Better Than Some Clubs

Loss of Greenberg, Gehringer and Others Will Be Felt, However

By JUDSON BAILEY

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 26 (AP)—Without Hank Greenberg and Charley Gehringer the Detroit Tigers are a toothless pelt of the team that won the American League pennant only two years ago, but it is time to refute the cross libel that they are the worst looking club in Florida.

Detroit was truly desolate until a few days ago. It had a sackful of holdouts, some of the players who had signed for cuts were unhappy, nobody was hitting and almost everybody played atrociously.

But somehow order has come out of chaos and the Tigers now seem sure to be fighting for whatever scraps are left lying around the back entrance of the first division.

Pitching Uncertain

The pitching is sound even though the staff has more mysteries than an omnibus collection of detective stories. Buck Newsom, if he felt inspired, could be a twenty-game winner again. Schoolboy Rowe is an unknown quantity. Hal Newhouser, a fine young southpaw two years ago, still is battling to regain his control and Tommy Bridges will be used chiefly for spot assignments on cool days.

However, Paul (Dizzy) Trout has looked tremendous at times and big Al Benton and rookies Hal White and Charley Fuchs all have pleased Manager Del Baker.

The real uncertainty about the Tigers rests in the fact that they will have to play four newcomers as regulars and not even Manager Baker will guess how they will do.

There will be two new outfielders and a new second base combination and Baker's best estimate of the situation today was, "I'm just letting the boys battle among themselves and when the season opens

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, March 26 — (Wide World) — There was something heart warming in a picture of Joe Louis and Billy Conn, natty in their soldier uniforms, grinning affably at each other during Conn's visit to Fort Dix, where Louis is training for his bout Friday night against Abe Simon.

Heart warming because it seemed to typify something so thoroughly American; the idea that we might have our squabbles but just let anybody else try to but in and he's going to get his ears whacked from all directions.

Conn and Louis are members of the fight family, those hardy souls who commit legalized mayhem on each other with a fez, or many dollars provocation. Less than a year ago the Pittsburgh kid and the Brown Bomber did their level best to commit great bodily harm on each other on a balmy summer evening at the Polo Grounds.

Now they are buddies in a bigger game, teamed with millions of other Americans against the intrusion of outsiders. That picture expressed that unity more adequately than pallid words.

Three Champs in Uniform

And it also summoned up the idea that the fight game is contributing its share to the armed services. That's their business, fighting, isn't it? And they're showing they're just as quick to fight for their country as they are for a fat purse.

More than a score of men who might be called ranking boxers already are in uniform. The list includes three champions—Louis, Fred Cochrane, Walter King, and Gus Lesnevich, lightweight titleholder.

Here are a few of the present crop of great and near-great who now fight in the ring only when they get the permission of superior officers:

Billy Soose, Marty Servo, Georgie Abrams, Steve Belloise, Tommy Tucker, Fred Apostoli, Al Nettlow, Hal Agin, Al Davis Boom-Boom Mancini, Patsi Giovanelli, Tommy Gomez, Marty Clark, Mike Raffa, Tommy Roman.

That's just hitting the high spots, of course. There are scores of lesser lights who have abandoned their ring careers, at least temporarily, to fight with a gun. And veterans who had hung up their gloves, such as Lou Ambers.

Picture Deserves Frame

A pretty fair showing, if you should ask us. The kids in the ring game have fight in their hearts. Otherwise they wouldn't be in there. And the bigger the fight the better they like it. They've got their chance to be in the biggest fight of all, and they're taking advantage of it. They'll maul each other unmercifully. But just let an outsider try to chisel in. They'll stand side by side to teach him a lesson.

After it's all over they may return to the business of methodically chopping each other's faces into cube steaks. Without malice. It's just their business, that's all. But right now, although they might occasionally work out on each other with the blessing of the army or navy authorities, they are as one against the common foe.

That picture of Louis and Conn deserves a frame. In its mute way it expresses about as well as anything we've seen the unity of purpose which will make a winning war for our side.

Mountaineers Praised By Rep. Randolph

WASHINGTON, March 26 (AP)—Congratulations to the national invitational basketball champions, the Mountaineers of West Virginia University, were heard on the floor of the House today.

Representative Randolph (D-WVa) telling of the 47-45 victory over Western Kentucky state last night in New York, declared that "the fighting qualities of these splendid boys from the hills won out against odds."

Carney Auto Parts Team Captures 115-Pound Title in Tourney Here

LaSalle Jupers, Acorn Big Five and Big Five Win Games

Carney's Auto Parts basketball team won the 115-pound title in the Western Maryland A.A.U. Basketball championships last night by defeating John's Delicatets 34 to 24 as the 1942 tournament here entered the second session.

The new champions took a 12 to 6 lead in the first period, held an 18 to 13 advantage at the half and was in front 27 to 19 at the end of the third period. Lindsay, Carney center, with 13 points, led the offensive.

In other games last night the LaSalle Jupers turned back Shober's Restaurant 38 to 32 in the 145-pound division; Acorn Big Five trimmed the Tri-Towns Merchants 43 to 34 in the unlimited class while the Cumberland Big Five walloped Trinity Methodist 35 to 7 in the 130-pound division.

Tonight's sessions will get under way at 6:30 with Westmar Bombers meeting the LaSalle Jupers at 6:30.

7:30—Junior Collegians vs. Original Midgets.

8:30 — Diamond Restaurant vs. Flying Five.

9:30—Derby's Big Five vs. Frostburg Legion.

FAMOUS SPORTSMEN ARE CONDITIONING MANY OF THE NAVY'S FLIERS

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 26 (AP) The army may have its Joe Louises and Hank Greenbergs but Navy officials can point to more famous names in one batch of newcomers than any other service branch.

Lieut. Comdr. Tom Hamilton, director of the V-5 physical fitness program, said today that a virtual who's who of sport parades daily inside the guarded United States naval academy walls where 200 coaches and former star athletes began an indoctrination course as commissioned naval reserve officers last Monday.

Turning the men loose today for a special press session, Hamilton said the V-5ers, who will whip future naval fliers into tiptop physical shape, include:

Nineteen assistant college coaches.

Thirteen football stars who have played in a bowl game or in one of the major collegian-professional football games.

Thirteen products of the National Professional Football League.

Nine national champions in sports ranging from track and skiing to wrestling.

Four former major league baseball players.

Eleven former major league baseball players.

Eleven coaches or athletes holding masters degrees.

A law school graduate and a Phi Beta Kappa member.

Giants Defeat Dodgers 8 to 4

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The New York Giants ran their exhibition winning streak to three games today with an 8-4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers behind a two-hit pitching job by Bill McGee, who blanked the National League champs for six innings.

The Dodgers nicked Cliff Melton for five hits and three runs in the last three frames but couldn't overtake the Giants, who clouted nine safeties off Fred Fitzsimmons and Hugh Casey.

Boston Braves Lose To Montreal Royals

SANFORD, Fla., March 26 (AP)—A quartet of errors and some poor pitching of the Boston Braves gave the Montreal Royals of the International League a 6-0 decision today over the national league club.

Cubs Will Meet Today

The Potomac Valley Cubs, one of the top teams of the Allegany Softball League last season, will reorganize for the 1942 campaign at a meeting this evening at 7 o'clock at the home of John Armstrong, Triple Lakes.

Cincinnati Buys Gerald Walker

TAMPA, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds poured more money into their left field problem tonight by purchasing holdout Gerald Walker from the Cleveland Indians of the American League.

General Manager Warren C. Giles of the Reds did not disclose the purchase price, but it was believed to be around $20,000.

Walker, 33, refused to take a $5,000 pay cut from the Indians and has said he would retire to his Orlando, Fla., drugstore unless he got the same salary as last year.

Giles sought to get in touch with him immediately in an effort to bring him to terms before the Reds break camp next Monday.

Walker is expected to be used in left field, where Manager Bill McKechnie and Giles have spent upwards of $300,000 in four years in an effort to find a man who can both hit and field.

For nine years Walker was a ranking slugger of the American League, but last year he hit only .283 and drove in 48 runs in 121 games.

Ridgeley Gunners Plan Sunday Shoot

The Ridgeley Rod and Gun Club will hold another of its series of shoots at the club traps Sunday, beginning at noon, with the prize list including chickens, hams and Defense Stamps. There will be both scatter target and trap events.

Twenty-four quail received from the West Virginia Conservation Commission were stocked in the Ridgeley section yesterday.

Eight Teams Will Fight Two Basketball Titles at Morgantown

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 26 (AP)—Eight West Virginia high school basketball teams, geared for State Championship tournament, bivouacked in or near Morgantown tonight, awaiting the start of play on the West Virginia university Field House floor tomorrow.

The Fairmont West Polar Bears, installed as favorites to take their third title, remained at nearby Fairmont, where Stonewall Jackson Generals of Charleston also were quartered. The Barrackville Bisons, in the Class B division, for schools of less than 250 enrollment, also will commute to the games.

But the other teams, including Huntington Central and the Weirton Red Riders in Class A, and Athens, Bethany and Marsh Fork in Class B, came on to this Monongalia county city.

They found a city already made basketball conscious by the victory of the West Virginia University Mountaineers in the championship finale of the National Invitation tournament in New York last night.

Besides Fairmont West, only Huntington among the four finalists in each division previously won the championship, the Pony Express having taken the crown in 1925, 1931 and 1937. The Express was runner-up for the title in 1941, losing to Clarksburg victory in the final game, 38-33.

Fairmont West and Weirton also were tournament finalists last year, Fairmont losing to Charleston in the first round, and Weirton being eliminated in the semi-finals by Huntington.

University officials disclosed that the advance sale of tickets for the tournament had fallen below expectations but attributed this to the Mounutaineers' temporary monopoly on basketball interest, and predicted that business would pick up before the first game, between Barracksville and Bethany in the B division at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Browns Win 12-1

DE LAND, Fla., March 26 (AP)—After compiling an enviable exhibition record against Major League opposition this spring, the St. Louis Browns today enjoyed a virtual holiday in slapping down the De-land Red Caps, a Florida East Coast League outfit, 12 to 1.

Cleveland Rookie Hits Homer with Three Men on Bases

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 26 (AP)—Les Fleming, rookie first baseman, hit a home run with the bases filled in the fourth inning today to give the Cleveland Indians a 4-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Al Benton, the losing pitcher, allowed the Tribe only one hit in the first three innings. Russ Peters led off the fourth with a single, Ken Keltner singled and Jeff Heath walked. Then Fleming clouted over the right field fence.

Ben Hogan Wins Golf Tourney

Takes North-South Open With Record 271; Snead Is Second

By FRITZ LITTLEJOHN

PINEHURST, N. C., March 26 (AP)—Playing the course where he won his first tournament two years ago, belting Ben Hogan today won the North and South open golf championship with a record 271—17 strokes better than even par.

Shooting the finest 72-hole stretch of his dazzling career since he set the tournament record here at 277 in 1940, Hogan carded successive rounds of 67-68-67-69 over the 6,879-yard, par 72 course.

Defending Champion Sammy Snead came in second, with 276, bettering by one shot his own score in the North-South last year. Snead, tied with Byron Nelson for second place as the field went into the last 18 holes, scored a closing 68.

Nelson, the former Open P. G. A. king, finished with a 73 to tie Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago at 281 for third money.

Lester Kennedy, the young unknown from Lynn, Mass., who led the field opening day, had 73-74 and was deadlocked with open champion Craig Wood at 283.

Chandler Harper, 29-year-old veteran from Portsmouth, Va., who was all square with Hogan yesterday at the half-way mark, could do no better than a pair of 75s, and wound up seventh with 285.

It was Hogan's third tournament triumph this year and his ninth since he came out of oblivion in the 1940 event and went out to pile up a two year record as the country's leading scorer and money winner. He won so conclusively that he took all the glamour out the last round. Six full shots ahead of Snead and Nelson, only fire, flood or disaster could have stopped the poker-faced little money taker.

I'll put the best looking men out there."

Rightfield Is Problem

One of these problems is rightfield where the job rests between two freshmen, Bob Patrick, who hit .322 at Buffalo, and Don Ross, who batted .310 at Montreal. The other regular outfielders are expected to be Barney McCoskey and Roger (Doc) Cramer, the latter acquired from Washington during the winter.

Second base is an open race between Murray Franklin, who spent last summer at Little Rock but has been one of the best surprises of the training season, and Jim Bloodworth, who also was obtained from Washington.

The shortstop job seems likely to go to Bill Hitchcock who was purchased from Kansas City, although the veteran Eric McNair is a better hitter and still a bidder. Pinky Higgins will be at third and Rudy York on first. The Cherokee chief is streamlined almost beyond recognition and appears headed for a fine year.

standing in almost every game and both were topnotch scorers. Fradiska rolled 67 field goals through the nets and 24 fouls in taking top honors in the league with 158 tallies, while the "Barton Bomber" blasted the hoops with 55 field goals and 33 of 61 fouls to finish in second place. Inskeep was also second in scoring in 1940.

Cronin is still one of the best hitters in the game. The Yankees will tell you they'd rather see anyone else come to bat in a pinch. But Red Sox Joe is close to 36 years old and he's been around for some seventeen years. In baseball there is no synthetic substitute for legs.

Johnny Pesky, Cronin's young shortstop, is a fielding flash, but not so steaming at the plate. Joe knows a number of his older stars, including the brilliant Jimmy Foxx, are feeling the iron-handed grip of the years, the most relentless of sport's oppressors.

Lefty Grove is gone—Foxx is soon going—and others are barely clinging to Time's bough. The Red Sox still face the big IF of baseball—"if" they get some pitching.

fund collected $89,000 of a $189,000 gate which was built up by higher-priced tickets than for tomorrow's scuffle.

On that occasion, the Brown Bomber all but blew Buddy out of the ring in less than three minutes for the twentieth successful defense in his all-time record run as king of the clout industry.

Tomorrow he figures to do just about the same to Abie the Ample as he did to Baer, with only minor variations.

Abe lasted thirteen rounds the last time and was still on his feet, although somewhat the worse for wear, when the referee said "enough" for him. This time, off Joe's training, the roof might fall in at any moment, with the general forecast for the curtain to drop sometime in the first six acts.

There hasn't been enough betting on the fight to create a market. Louis is almost any price to win and 1 to 5 to hit the jackpot before the 15 rounds run out. Any way you look at it, army relief will get a payday and Abe will get a beating.

Senators Win

ORLANDO, Fla., March 26 (AP)—The Washington Senators fumbled most of their chances to score today but won over the St. Louis Cardinals, nevertheless, 2 to 1, because of the pitching of Early Wynn and Bill Zuber.

Allegany County Will Require 540 Sugar Registrars

Cards Will Be Available for 19,000 Families, Kopp Says

Registration Limited to 16 Hours in Schools on May 4, 5, 6 and 7

Approximately 540 registrars will be needed to register about 86,000 persons in Allegany for sugar ration cards on May 4, 5, 6 and 7 in public elementary schools of Allegany county, according to Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent.

Kopp said that registrars will be located in forty-two elementary schools in the county and estimated that there are a total of 19,000 families and an average of four and one-half persons to a family.

1,525 Families Listed

Approximately 1,525 families will be required to register at Beall elementary school and 1,000 families each at Pennsylvania Avenue school and Columbia street school in Cumberland. The smallest district is Dutch Hollow, of Mt. Savage, where thirty-five families are listed.

According to Thomas G. Pullen, Jr., state supervisor of schools, it is estimated that it takes about five minutes to register each person.

While one person may register for a family unit, a separate application must be made for every individual for a War Ration Book No. 1. This means that every one (all ages) in a community will be registered even though it will not be necessary for every person to register in person.

It has been estimated that it takes about five minutes to register each person and that there ought to be one registrar for every 160 persons to be registered over a period of four days for four hours each day. If hours of registration are increased, fewer registrars are needed.

Two Separate Registrations

Two separate registrations are to be held, the first of which will be for industrial and commercial users of sugar on April 28 and 29 in the high schools only. Kopp described industrial and commercial users as "all those who normally purchase sugar through wholesalers or directly from sugar refineries."

Principals of each school will be responsible for the registration in his territory. School teachers, school executives and volunteers from parent - teacher associations will serve as registrars, Kopp said.

Responsibility of the schools will be to conduct the first registration for civilians and trade and to distribute the first rationing books. Thereafter additional rationing books will be secured by the public from local rationing boards and not from the schools.

If a person does not register within the prescribed four days he will have to wait two weeks before he can register, then apply to the local rationing board for a rationing book.

Distribute Four Forms

Four forms are being distributed in conjunction with the sugar rationing registration. They include:

No. 1, War Ration Book No. 1; No. 2, Consumers' Application Form; No. 3, Instructions to Consumers; No. 4, Instructions to Rationing Personnel (Plan Book). Each ration book will contain a serial number.

Kopp revealed that the ration registration will not interfere with the school program and that the schools will continue through the registration period.

Hours of registration will be announced later.

Court Will Decide Custody of Two Children April 3

Grandparents File Writ of Habeas Corpus in Circuit Court

A writ of habeas corpus was signed by Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan yesterday ordering William Russell Brown and his wife, Elsie Louise Brown, to appear here in circuit court on April 3 for a hearing on the custody of two minor children who are their nephew and niece.

The writ was filed by Lelia Corinne Baldwin and David Baldwin, her husband, through Morgan C. Harris, attorney. They are the children's paternal grandmother and step-grandfather and had custody of the children from 1934 until 1939, the petition stated.

The petition stated that the mother of the two children died in 1934 and the father, James H. H. Brown, remarried in 1939 and he and his second wife were killed in an automobile accident in January, 1942.

The aunt and uncle of the two children allegedly took the two children into their home at this time and are holding them under restraint, the petition added. The aunt and uncle are residents of Baltimore.

Red Men Will Honor President Roosevelt At Class Adoption

Tonkaway Tribe No. 120, Improved Order of Red Men, will name a class in honor of Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the United States, at adoption ceremonies scheduled for Sunday, May 29, at 2:30 p. m., at the Wigwam, 25 Bedford street.

The president is an honorary member of the Red Men.

Thirty "palefaces" will be adopted at Sunday's exercises, increasing to 320 the number of members enrolled in Tonkaway Tribe.

Great chiefs of the order in the State of Maryland are invited to attend the adoption ceremony and dinner.

Joseph Bedinger Heads Civil Air Patrol Squadron

Local Unit Divided into Three Flights; Amick Heads State Group

Completion of the organization of the Cumberland squadron of the Civil Air Patrol was formulated last evening with the appointment of Joseph H. Bedinger as commanding officer at a meeting in the "Wigwam" of Tonkaway Tribe No. 120, Improved Order of Red Men, 25 Bedford street.

Other officers named for the Cumberland squadron include:

Wade Berg, executive officer; L. G. Trimmier, adjutant; Dr. Samuel M. Jacobson, medical officer; Burke P. Brown, intelligence officer; Forrest Miller, training officer; Virgil A. Parker, supply officer; Fred W. Jenkins, transportation officer, and Stewart Phillips, communications officer.

Comprises Three Flights

The Cumberland squadron is divided into three flights, namely, headquarters flight, in command of Fred W. Jenkins; Flight A, with Ellis Schwartzwelder in command and Flight B, with George B. Miltenberger as commanding officer.

Selection of uniforms, according to those prescribed by national headquarters, was discussed as was the adoption of suitable insignia. The shoulder insignia to be worn on the left arm comprises a white triangle inside a blue circle set off by the figure of a three blade red propeller. Insignia also will be worn on the cap and above the pocket of the shirt.

Training Is Discussed

Training for civil air patrol duties was discussed. These duties include first aid, flight maneuvers, consisting of formation flying, and regular ground military drills.

The Cumberland squadron is set up under the Maryland Wing of the Civil Air Patrol, which is under command of Arthur C. Hyde, operator of the Congressional Airport, of Rockville, Md., who learned to fly in Cumberland.

Under the Maryland Wing there are four different groups with Hagerstown, Taneytown and Cumberland comprising Group No. 1.

A. H. Amick Heads Group No. 1

A. H. Amick is the commanding officer of Group No. 1. Other officers are Arthur Lyem, executive officer; Ben Terry, adjutant; Dr. Frank U. Davis, medical officer; John D. Liebau, intelligence officer; George B. Miltenberger, training officer; John R. Nash, supply officer; Andrew W. Conner, transportation officer, and Frank V. Becker, communications officer.

The Hagerstown squadron, part of group No. 1 is commanded by Jesse E. Clem while John W. Dixon is squadron commander of the Taneytown unit.

Officers of State Wing

Officers of the Maryland Wing of the Civil Air Patrol include:

Arthur C. Hyde, commanding officer; J. E. DeVore, executive officer; O. Smith, adjutant; Dr. Welch, medical officer; S. Gordon, intelligence officer; E. Knapp, training officer; N. Morris, supply officer; Mrs. Langston, transportation officer, and H. Starr, communications officer.

Charles Shepherd Is Injured when Auto Leaves Road

Charles Shepherd, 16, Carpenter's Addition, Ridgeley, W. Va., was treated in Allegany hospital last night for severe lacerations of his chin and lip, suffered when his automobile reportedly ran off the highway near the Western Maryland railroad shops in Maryland Junction, W. Va., about 9 o'clock.

Attaches at the hospital said they understood Shepherd's face struck the windshield of his automobile. No report of the accident was made to Maryland State police.

Celanese Is Granted Four New Patents

Celanese Corporation of America this week was granted four United States Letters Patent, all directed to the crinkling or crimping of staple fibre by shrinking operations. The fibers thus treated lend themselves more readily to manipulation in the processes of making spun yarns.

Each of the four patents—Nos. 2,277,086; 2,277,093; 2,277,163 and 2,277,164—is directed to the use of different liquid media for effecting this crinkling or crimping.

Cumberland Firm Awarded $50,000 Airport Contract

6,800 Tons of Black-Top Will Be Used on No. 1 Runway

A $50,000 contract for the black-topping of runway No. 1 at the new Cumberland municipal airport in Wiley Ford, W. Va., has been awarded to the Cumberland Contracting Company, which will start work on the project about May 1, it was announced yesterday by Earl C. Robertson, vice-president.

6,800 Tons of Black-Top

Robertson said that the No. 1 runway 150 feet wide and 6,000 feet in length will be given a coat of black-top one and one half inches in thickness. He estimated that 6,800 tons of black-top will be used. The work will be started as soon as the stone base is put down by the WPA.

The contract was awarded by the Procurement division of the United States Treasury department, Baltimore. Bids were opened on February 27 and the contract was awarded on Monday, March 23. Four firms presented bids.

Complete Hagerstown Job

Robertson said that the Cumberland Contracting Company recently completed a $70,000 contract for excavating and grading at the Hagerstown municipal airport. A total of 100,000 cubic yards of dirt was removed under this contract. The job was started in November and completed early this month. Fifty men were employed on the project.

Local Library Receives Useful Garden Books

Six Volumes Recommended for Use by Amateur Gardeners

Spring arrived officially last week and the victory gardeners are already preparing their back yards for the seeds that will produce delicious early vegetables, succulent summer dinners and jar after jar of home grown provisions for next winter.

The easiest and safest way for the amateur gardener to learn is through books and the Cumberland Free Library offers an interesting list of books on vegetable growing, including the staple garden encyclopedia and manuals.

Books published this year include:

"The Food Garden," by Laurence and Edna Blair, a 'how-to-do-it-book' for the novice.

"Grow Your Own Vegetables," by Paul W. Dempsey, tells all about growing vegetables. Written by an expert of a state experimental station, it will be helpful to the back yard gardener as well as the full time truck gardener.

"Twenty-one Vegetables Anyone Can Grow," by Roe Robbins, is a practical handbook for the amateur gardener. There are sections on buying seeds, planting, harvesting, storing, etc., for every vegetable covered in this book. Helpful charts and plans are included.

Other useful garden books are "Gardening—a Complete Guide," by Montague Free; "The Vegetable Garden," by E. F. Farrington and "Gardening for Fun, Health and Money," by A. F. Collins.

Redemptorist Will Visit St. Patrick's

Father O'Leary To Preach on Good Friday; Palm Will Be Given Sunday

The Rev. Father Charles O'Leary, of the Redemptorist Order, Washington, D. C., will conduct the Three Hours Agony from 12 o'clock noon to 3 p. m., on Good Friday, April 3, in St. Patrick's church, North Centre street, it was announced yesterday by the Rev. Father Francis J. McKeown, pastor.

The Three Hours Agony is in commemoration of Christ's three hours on the cross and Father O'Leary will give seven eleven-minute discourses based on the seven last words of Christ.

Tenebrae services will be conducted at St. Patrick's church on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Holy Week at 7:30 p. m. A Solemn Mass of the Blessed Sacraments will be held on Holy Thursday at 8 a. m., and a High Mass of the Presanctified will be held on Good Friday at 8 a. m. There will be blessing of fire, water and paschal candles at the 8 a. m. Mass Saturday and at the 11 a. m. Solemn Mass Easter Sunday, the Rev. Father O'Leary will preach the sermon.

Palms will be distributed at the three local Catholic churches on Palm Sunday, March 29.

At St. Patrick's, palms will be blessed at 10:45 and distributed after the 11 o'clock Mass. At St. Mary's palms will be distributed after the 10:30 Mass and at SS. Peter and Paul church palms will be given out before the 10:30 Mass.

St. Mary's will hold Tenebrae services on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of Holy Week at 7:30 p. m.

Van Dyke Beards, Walrus Mustaches And Sideburns May Be on Way Back

Threat of Razor Blade Shortage Causes Rush in Local Stores

The day of Van Dyke beards, sideburns and walrus mustaches is on the way back, if statements of Cumberland men can be credited.

First the ladies were set to worrying about controlling their figures without girdles and now the men, threatened with a razor blade shortage, are contemplating letting their whiskers grow.

If the beards come back, no doubt many a fair lady's heart will cease to flutter when she meets the man of her choice—until she gets used to seeing the bushy face put in its appearance, at least.

It seems to be the consensus of opinion among Cumberland merchants who sell razor blades, however, that the day of beards will be slow in returning.

Most stores have an almost unlimited supply of blades on hand and anticipate no unusual difficulties in replacing them once they are exhausted.

Rush Unprecedented

The almost unprecedented rush to purchase blades, dealers at drug stores, novelty shops and shoe shine parlors say, followed close on the heels of publication of a government order Wednesday limiting men to one razor blade a week.

One store-keeper yesterday reported the "biggest run in months" and that held true for practically every merchant that was questioned.

There was one though, who said he didn't notice any increase. "Those kind of things shouldn't be put in the papers. They're what cause shortages," he declared.

Twenty Dollar Business

"One man came in and got a hundred blades," one salesman reported, "and that's the way it ran all night. A man who usually buys a small pack of five blades was getting three times that many Wednesday night and today we did a $20 business."

At one of the larger drug stores the manager reported selling completely out of Rolls razors, a straight razor with a shield that sells for $12.50. "We sold a couple electric razors, too," he stated, "and that's more than we usually get rid of in one day. I've been wondering how much the razor manufacturers paid the government to put that in the papers," he remarked, referring to the threatened shortage.

Ordered Sharpening Devices

The same salesman said he hadn't received any requests for sharpening devices but "I've already ordered straps and honing devices just in case the demand comes."

"We had no more customers than usual," another storekeeper reported, "but those we did have bought more than they ever did before. We sold almost $10 worth of blades and that almost cleaned out our stock."

Bought Two Hundred Blades

In another establishment, one man bought 200 blades and others were buying five or six packs of five blades each, "just so I won't run short."

The storekeepers have heard a lot of talk about buying electric shavers and going back to the old straight razors. One druggist displayed a box of used razor blades he has been collecting for defense. In it was a straight razor and he said he was afraid the owner might come back to get it.

Letting It Grow

One salesgirl said when she first found out about the razor blade rush, she started "pushing" them to help business, but "I asked one man and he said he didn't want any, 'I'm letting my beard grow.'"

But by and large, most of the stores have plenty of blades on

Parents, relatives and friends of men who are being inducted into the army as well as men who may soon go to camp will no doubt be interested in excerpts of a letter the News received yesterday from Wesley Blackburn, of Keyser, reporter on the News for the last ten months who left a week ago yesterday for army service and is now—or was at the time he wrote the letter—stationed at Fort Hayes, near Columbus, O.

"This process of induction into the United States Army is likely to be a tiresome and somewhat disagreeable time, especially at a busy post such as Fort Hayes", Blackburn writes.

The men in my group consisted of 350 draftees from Mineral, Hardy, Berkeley, Pendleton and Grant counties in West Virginia and about one-third of them were "feeling no pain" at first. They were celebrating.

"We reached Fort Hayes Thursday evening at 11:45 o'clock and were marched to the induction hall. There, officers called roll and ordered all men to turn over any liquor. You can easily imagine the looks on the face of one man as he handed over a full quart of 'Four Roses'.

"After that we stripped to the waist and ran past two medical officers and then were taken to our barracks where blankets and sheets were issued to us. That was at 1 a. m. and it was easily 1:30 a. m. Friday when we were in bed.

"Few of the men slept that morning and practically all were up and dressed when lights were turned on at 5:45 o'clock. We were all so tired that it was not funny.

"The induction routine could easily be completed in eight hours but due to a good many doctors, including red tape and inefficiency, about three days are required.

As an aid to classification, all men are given an intelligence test and a mechanical aptitude test and later a classification interview.

"While in this process all draftees are urged to take out insurance, mine for a $5,000 policy costs $3.95 a month. That is reasonable enough—its also quite a sum to subtract from the $21 a month we will receive. For $7.90 I could take out the full $10,000 which is the maximum amount one can receive. This, of course, is a 'group' type insurance and must be changed later to a permanent type.

"The system used in giving us typhoid shots was efficient enough. An army doctor was sitting in a chair on a table and as we walked by him he aimed the syringe in the direction of our right shoulder in about a two-foot swing—he didn't miss.

"It was over before we felt the sting of the needle. Frankly I didn't feel it until the point was pulled out. The process took about ten to fifteen seconds per man.

"The worst part of it for me was to see the color of the wad of cotton soaked in alcohol that was used to clean our shoulders. It was a dirty gray, long before my turn came.

"Eating in the general mess here is quite an experience as the place seats about 1,000 per-

Johnstown Skate Troupe To Appear At LaSalle Party

"Loyalty Night" Program Will Be Held Today at Crystal Rink

Skaters representing the parochial and public schools of Cumberland and nearby towns will congregate at the Crystal Park skating rink, five miles west of Cumberland tonight to honor the 1942 championship basketball team of LaSalle high school on "Loyalty Night" and pay tribute to Coach Patrick J. Conway, now serving his country in the United States Naval Reserves.

As a contributing feature towards the evening's success, Mr. Young, manager of Crystal park, will add a troupe of professional skaters from Pennsylvania to the program. These floor show artists will include Sis Byrnes, of Johnstown, the seven-year-old wonder girl of novelty skating.

The skating program, which will hold sway from 8 p. m., to midnight, will include numbers dedicated to the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, Allegany high school, Girls' Central high school, Fort Hill high school, Ursuline Academy, St. Mary's high school, coaches of all Cumberland schools, the Cumberland Times-News, faculties of all schools, Coach Conway, the LaSalle P-TA and Athletic Association and the LaSalle basketball squad.

During the grand march, the organist will play "The Notre Dame Victory March," "The March Is On," and "Anchor's Aweigh."

Lindley Dye Is Re-elected Head Of District CIO

Western Maryland Industrial Union Council Elects Officers

Lindley Dye, of Barton, was re-elected president of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council CIO, last night at a meeting held in the United Rubber Workers hall.

Other officers named were Harry Robertson, of Midland, first vice president; Ralph Beard, second vice president; John Neal, recording secretary; and William C. Smith, of Lonaconing, financial secretary.

An executive committee comprising Stephen Cesnick, Klondike; Mel Fiske, Elizabeth Odgers, Frostburg; and David Watkins, was elected. Trustees named were E. J. Williams, Westernport; P. I. Hamilton and Hugh McVeigh, Frostburg; Charles Paugh, of Bloomington, was named sergeant-at-arms.

The officers were installed by James Collins, of LaVale, an organizer of the United Construction Workers. The council voted to ask the mayor and city council take some action on the erection of a suitable memorial to Victor C. Tamboileo, Cumberland youth who was killed at Pearl Harbor while on duty with the navy.

The city of Cumberland will also be asked by letter to make a survey of the available scrap iron and steel in the city and inspect unused street car rails still imbedded in various local streets to determine if salvage is worth the cost.

Evans Brothers Enlist in Navy

Seven Men Who Enlisted Here Complete Training at Norfolk, Va.

Two brothers, Clarence E. and Charles M. Evans, of Cresaptown, enlisted in the United States Navy yesterday at the local recruiting office. They will leave Monday for the examination station in Baltimore.

Seven men who enlisted several months ago at the local station have completed their recruit training at Norfolk, Va. Some were assigned to naval units while others were assigned to trade schools for further training.

They are James E. Hall, son of Mrs. Josephine Hall, 517 Henderson avenue; Eldred K. Stahl, son of Stewart Stahl, Grantsville, selected for the Diesel school; Carlton Bittinger, Jr., son of O. C. Bittinger, Mountain Lake Park, selected for the carpenter's school.

David P. Stuby, son of Joseph H. Stuby, Saxton, Pa.; Donald M. Beavers, son of Homer Beavers, Beryl, W. Va.; Charles K. Robey, son of C. R. Robey, Paw Paw, W. Va., selected for aviation ordnanceman school; and Charles R. Kreiger, son of Mrs. John Kreiger, Wiley Ford, W. Va., selected for radio school.

Two Births Are Reported in Hospitals

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Allison, 402 Hill street, announce the birth of a son yesterday afternoon in Allegany hospital.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Percy Miller, Ellerslie, yesterday afternoon in Memorial hospital.

HOBBY SHOW HAS VARIED DISPLAY OF OLD OBJECTS

Three nights and two matinees remain for persons to visit the Hobby and Antique Show at SS. Peter and Paul hall which is sponsored by the Western Maryland Coin Club.

Persons interested in old guns, books, clocks, pictures and in fact anything you could mention will find more than one of these items on display.

Many exhibits of old coins are included by local and out of town persons. For an evening of enlightment and entertainment the hobby show will furnish the answer. Exhibitors include Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor and Attorney General William C. Walsh. Frank Lee Carl, local newspaper man, is showing a varied collection of newspapers, books and other relics of days gone by.

SMITH TRIPLETS FIRST GUESTS AT OPENING OF Y ICE CREAM BAR

Central Y. M. C. A.'s new innovation, an ice cream bar, attracted about 900 children and adults last night. The room is known as the "Victory Room" and is decorated in a patriotic motif.

The first guests to enter the room after a blue ribbon across the entrance was cut by William H. Lewis, general secretary, were the Smith triplets, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smith, of LaVale.

A large mural painted by Robert Colomy and donated to the Y is the most striking part of the room. Luminous paint was used in painting the mural and when the lights are low it shines out with its message of democracy.

Light and dark blue colors were used in the general decoration including the draperies. The waitresses wear red, white and blue uniforms with the slogan "Victory Room" embroidered on their sleeves.

A music box furnishes music for dancing and the bar is open each night except Friday and Saturday until 11 o'clock and until midnight on those two nights.

Sanders Rites Held

Germany Is No. 1 Enemy of Allies, Speaker Asserts

Kiwanians Are Told Entry of Japan Will Only Prolong the War

Prof. Mulford Stough Says U. S. Troops Are in Many Countries

Members of the Cumberland Kiwanis club yesterday heard a teacher of modern European history declare that in his opinion the entry of Japan into World War No. 2 would only prolong the struggle and not affect the outcome; heard him predict that the Middle East would become the major theater of the war and assert that the No. 1 enemy of the Allies is Germany and say that the German nation must be knocked out before the Allies can afford to do much against any other country.

The speaker was Prof. Mulford Stough, teacher of modern European history and British Empire history at Dickinson college, in Carlisle, Pa., for the past seventeen years. It was his second appearance before the Kiwanis club here since the present war broke out in Europe.

Hitler Needs Oil

Speaking on the subject "The Nazi Pattern for Spring and Summer in the Middle East," Prof. Stough said that the deciding battles of the war more than likely will be fought in the Middle East, probably in Persia.

Germany needs oil badly, the speaker asserted and told the Kiwanians that the Germans are now making synthetic gasoline. The Nazis, he said, have been unable to get near the amount of oil out of Roumania that they expected and said the country's entire output is only about one-half the amount Germany needs to conduct a major war. He declared Hitler still lacks one-third enough oil to carry on a major war. That was one of the reasons he gave in expressing the opinion that Hitler will try to take Persia.

Two possible places where Hitler can get oil, Prof. Stough asserted are Iraq and Persia, but declared he did not think the Germans could take them.

Pointing out three ways Hitler might try to take the Caucuses, the speaker said he could try to drive north of the black sea through Russia. Go through Turkey from Bulgaria and Greece and attempt to go through Egypt from Lybia.

Even if Hitler could take Persia, Prof. Stough said it would be difficult to get oil out as it would have to be piped to a Persian gulf port and taken out by tankers. Germany does not have many tankers, he declared, does not have control of the sea and asserted the Nazis could not move oil by sea.

Germans Far from Whipped

Saying that Germany is far from whipped, Prof. Stough warned that the Nazis will bounce back about May with an all-out offensive against Russia and probably in other places, but asserted that he did not think Hitler would be successful in his 1942 campaign. He told the Kiwanians that he could not see how Germany could be much stronger. That many men and much material have been lost in the battle against Russia.

The professor declared that Russia has 12,000,000 men ready to meet the Germans and pointed out that the Russians were much better prepared now than when Hitler's legions invaded the country last summer. He said England alone has sent 3,000 tanks to Russia and that many planes and war material have

Final Rites Will Be Held Saturday For A. C. Rawlings

Bedford Road Man Was Grandson of Col. Moses Rawlings

Funeral services for Albert C. Rawlings, 89, who died early yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Herbert J. Wentz, Bedford road, will be held Saturday afternoon at the Kight funeral home.

Mr. Rawlings, a native of Rawlings, was the last of a family of twelve children. His parents were Moses and Rebecca Rawlings.

A grandson of Col. Moses Rawlings, of Revolutionary war fame, he was at one time employed as superintendent of coal mines by his brother-in-law, the late Maj. Alexander Shaw, Baltimore, in the Elk Garden and Meyersdale fields.

Following his occupation as superintendent of mines, he took charge of the Hutson farm at Rawlings, owned by Maj. Shaw and later bequeathed to Mr. Rawlings's daughters, Mrs. Wentz and Mrs. Charles W. Lanham, Polesville.

Mr. Rawlings's father, Moses Rawlings, at one time served as sheriff of Allegany county.

Surviving, besides Mrs. Wentz and Mrs. Lanham, are three grandsons, three granddaughters and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Rawlings, who predeceased him, was the former Fannie Hutson, a daughter of Henry Hutson.

Burial will be in the family cemetery at Rawlings.
